Lake Braddock Secondary School

Burke, Virginia 22015

After a hearty lunch, ninth graders display the close friendships formed while eating.

Imagine a heavy snowfall during the middle of winter, covering the grass and naked trees, producing a white dreamworld that seems to stretch forever. From a distance, the newly fallen snow has a uniform luster and whiteness. But a closer look reveals individual snowflakes, each different, each unique.

As you look back at your years at Lake Braddock, many things may seem a blur, yet some special moments, individuals, and symbols will stay with you for the rest of your life. Friends and teachers who share in your joys as well as sorrows will remain in your memory long after you walk out the doors of Lake Braddock. All the mornings spent at your locker laughing and sharing the latest gossip with all your friends seem to take on a whole new meaning. And the few windows connecting you to the outside world, which bring the warm rays of the sun or the chills of dark clouds stay focused. As you remember Lake Braddock, these are the small yet special things which help create the overall picture of the school.

How about all the times you shared with other people before and after classes? Classes offer learning, but at the same time there are new experiences and friendships to be made. How long will you remember the first frog you dissected in biology or the dances you learned in P.E.? All the eight-minute social intervals between classes when there never seemed to be enough time to catch up on the day's events — with you and your friend screaming from opposite sides of the main hall trying to get those last few words in as the bell rang. And of course, during lunch when all of you tried to sit and eat comfortably at a table for five so as not to miss any juicy details or plans for the weekend.

On their way to get more dirt for planting, students express their pride in Lake Braddock as they help out at Beautification.

Escaping to Dogwood Court for lunch, Tiffany Arsen and J. C. Phillips share a few quiet moments together to catch up on the day's events.

Before heading off for fifth period class, Mickie Shellington and Pat Haskins laugh heartily as Beverly Cumes shares an experience she went through during one of her vacations.

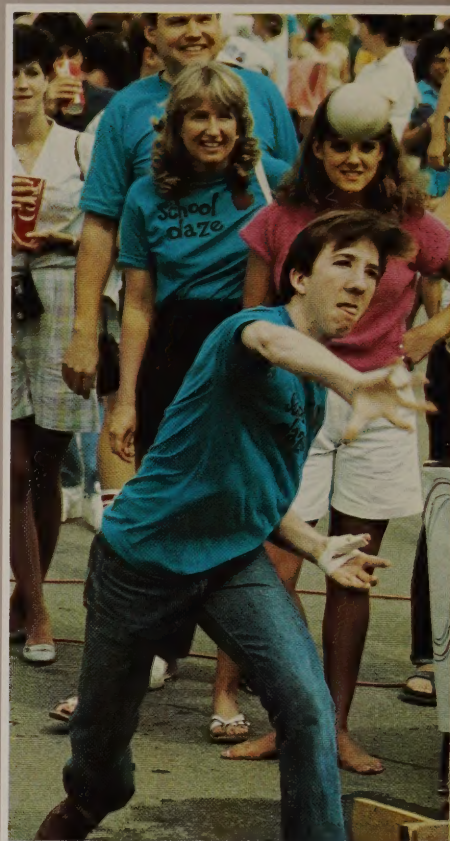

As Kristin Hodes paints '86 on Skip Griffith's pants, he shows he is behind the class 100%.

On their way to get bedsheets for the senior class float at the Springfield K-Mart, Variny Yim, Andy Schwarz, and Sheila O'Connor "horse" around.

And last, but not least, the two-inches-per-minute walks to class in the main hallway when you really became closer to some of your classmates.

Relationships and interactions with different people during the day can be quite special. Like the first time you go to see the school nurse and she is more than willing to help you with a sprained ankle or just give you a band-aid for a cut. And the teachers and counselors who have erased the line between student and administration and have become your friends. You remember their eagerness to teach something that at one time seemed like a foreign language to you, and then take the time to explain it over 10 times. And as you look back at the clean hallways that welcomed you every morning, the picture of the custodians working their late night shifts to make the school a pleasant place for you appears. Finally, the special group of friends who seem to always be there for you through thick and thin. Whether you need someone to talk to or just a shoulder to cry on, you can always count on them to be caring and understanding. Late night talks on the phone together, a quick trip to McDonald's for a Big Mac, or "checking out" a cute boy or girl down the hall all contribute to the friendships that make your years at Lake Braddock such an important part of your life.

So, now as you imagine the snow-covered land like a blanket of cotton, perhaps the individual snowflakes falling from the sky have more meaning and value to the whole picturesque scene. As you remember Lake Braddock, these are the images that stand out — these are the little things that mean a lot.

Little things mean a lot . . .

STUDENT LIFE

A Lake Braddock student's life outside of school is just as important as their life inside school. Homecoming week, weekends, parties, jobs, friends — all of these things mean a lot. It is these things that help each student learn and grow as an individual throughout their high school years. It is these things that will last a lifetime.

Sometimes though, the little things in life tend to be overlooked — the smiles, the laughter and the picture of a friendly face. Such details tend to be excluded from our memories in the passing years. But it is the details, the little things that mean a lot. The little things which remind us of a lasting friendship, an old love or a special evening out on the town. The little things that make up each student's life are memories that should not be forgotten. The memories that will be treasured always.

Envisioning a new year

As summer beach-combers headed towards home and vacations came to a close, students' thoughts turned to the upcoming school year. August 26 marked the day that students began the 1985-1986 school year. Lake Braddock's student body was larger this year than ever before in its thirteen year history with an opening enrollment of 4707 students. This enormous number of students generated the need for fifty-eight buses to transport them to and from school, even though many people preferred to drive or to catch rides with friends.

Once they arrived at school, many students found that the crowded buses were simply the beginning of many first day hassles such as finding hidden classes and rushing through crowded halls. Seventh graders especially had difficulty becoming adjusted to Lake Braddock. Awed by the size of the school, seventh grader Mike Dillon reflected the first impressions of his classmates, "It's too big and there's too many people." The seniors, however, looked at August 26 as a chance to get an early start on senior spirit by camping out on school grounds anticipating their final year at Lake Braddock. Katie Gaffney summed up the opinion of most seniors by saying, "It hurts a lot knowing it's my last year at Lake Braddock."

At the end of a long exhausting day, seventh graders and seniors alike regret the end of summer but at the same time looked forward with excitement to a new beginning and a new school year.

Bicycles serve as a common form of transportation for many students.

Returning students chat excitedly about the upcoming school year after arriving early for the first day.

Senior Wendy Pierce demonstrates her privilege of driving to school and parking in the senior parking lot.

Facing the first day lunch lines, hungry students are eager to grab a bite to eat.

Fall into fun

Music played in the back-ground as students, parents, teachers and children alike strolled from booth to booth. Though the Fall Festival opened at 10:00 a.m. on September 21st, SGA members, club sponsors and a few helpful students arrived early to prepare for what proved to be an eventful day.

The festival, sponsored by the PTA, provided fun and activities for all. The goldfish dunk, sponsored by the National Honor Society, the Cake Walk, by the junior class, the football toss, sponsored by VICA, and the challenging ladder climb, by the class of '86 were a few such activities.

"My favorite game is the goldfish dunk. The music is great! It is something to do on a Saturday," commented seventh grader Mark Bolt.

Those with hearty appetites did not go hungry. The Afro-American Club offered a BBQ chicken dinner while the French Honor Society sponsored a bake sale of french foods. The Band Boosters provided pizza with a variety of toppings.

Musical entertainment such as performances by the band Unusual Art and the Lake Braddock Fine Arts Quintet pleased many music lovers. In addition, the Faculty Variety Show "School Daze" was an overall success.

Students, eager to comment on the festival, felt that it went over well with the student body. "It's better than last year's," commented eighth grader Tammy Bartholomew, "because they have the dunking machine."

Junior Christine Stancil added her feelings, "This is my first year here and I think this is a really good place to come together and have fun for good causes."

Bruin spirit still grows

On the eve of the annual Homecoming football game, spirited students, faculty, parents, and Lake Braddock Alumni gathered together on home territory to support our undefeated Bruins as they confronted district rivals, the West Springfield Spartans. Although the team appeared both mentally and physically prepared, the Bruins suffered a devastating 10-0 loss.

Half time performances such as the Marching Band, the float presentation, and the final selection of our Homecoming queen filled the stands with excitement. With both teams scoreless at the half, the Bruins returned to the field renewed in confidence knowing that the school was behind them.

But the Spartan defense held strong and West Springfield opened the scoring in the third quarter with a 33-yd. field goal. Even though the Bruins put forth their best effort, the Spartans took over, scoring a touchdown with several minutes remaining in the game. Time was running out and the Bruins were unable to score. To the football players and the crowd this was a heartfelt loss, but the season was not yet over.

As the crowd cheers on fellow Bruins, students enjoy each other's company and the spirit of the game.

Court sparks excitement

The stadium seemed full of anxiety for it was the night of the Homecoming game when the Homecoming Queen would be announced; Halftime would be the highlight of the night's events.

The court consisted of Mandy Cole and Mindy Parker representing the ninth grade and Lisa Farrow and Jessica French for tenth grade. The nominees for the junior class were Paige Geiger and Michelle Kime and representing the senior class were Kim Buskirk, Laura Keyes, Noel LaFontaine, Karla Spagnola and Beth Stoy. Elected by the student body, these girls were chosen best to represent their class.

Saluted by the Color Guard, each was escorted down the field by their fathers and received a box which contained a silk carnation. The tension heightened as the girl to receive the white flower would be crowned Homecoming Queen. The moment everyone had been waiting for finally came; for this was one of the biggest events of Homecoming week. Everyone was overcome with excitement as they announced first runner up, Kim Buskirk and senior Laura Keyes as Homecoming Queen 85-86' on the evening of October 11, 1985. They were both then driven around the track, as balloons were released and the crowd roared with approval!

Bruins floating down Broadway

As a tradition begun in 1983, the annual Homecoming parade presented all the floats constructed by each class. Beginning at the Ashbourn community center, the progression continued down Lake Braddock Drive until reaching the football field, where the float judging took place.

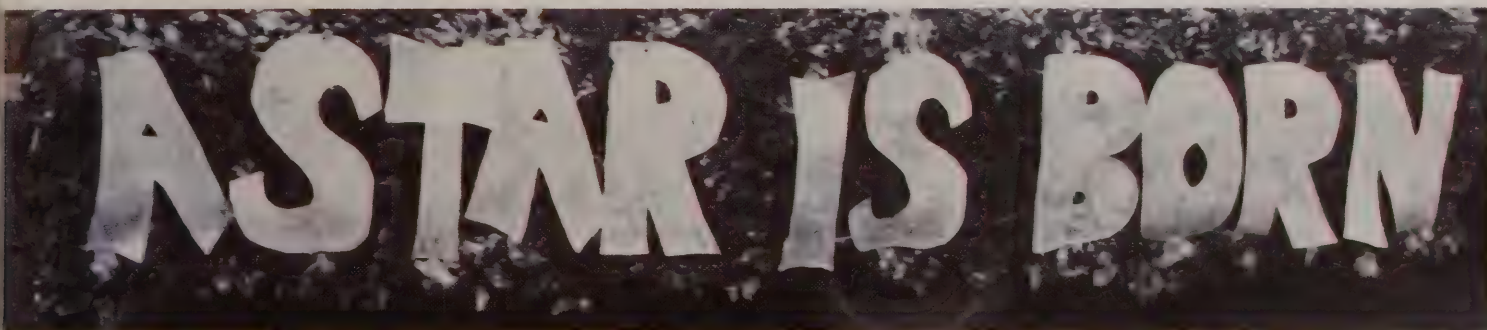

The parade featured not only the class floats, but also the marching band, the drill team, the cheerleaders, the Homecoming court, the S.G.A., and various other clubs and organizations. Clowns, balloons, fire engines, and candy brought forth smiles and laughter from many young spectators.

At halftime of the Homecoming game, the floats were once again presented to the crowd along with the results of the float judging. The freshmen class came in first place with "A Step to Stardom," the sophomores took second place with "A Star is Born," and the juniors clinched third place with a bear standing on the corner of 87th Street and Broadway.

Katie Prosser, a member of the sophomore class, summed up the annual event, "I think the parade was a success, due to the amount of people that attended. The floats were well done and showed that hard work pays off."

Jessica French and Lisa Farrow present their winning smiles as they enjoy the ride in the third annual Homecoming parade.

The sophomore float's theme gains second place recognition.

Strolling through the orange, white and red streamer archway, couples arrived at the dance in their best suits and dresses ready to dance the night away. A backdrop of the city at night together with stars carrying the names of each couple provided the atmosphere of an evening in the heart of New York City. Tables decorated with a top hat and a red carnation added a touch of class to the setting.

The live band, Oz, provided the music that sent the evening into high gear. Refreshments of punch and cookies were available for those exhausted from dancing to the music.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Homecoming Queen Laura Keyes and her court. Couples could have their pictures taken for $5.00 and those who wished, could have their invitations returned at the end of the dance as a reminder of the elegant evening.

The Homecoming Dance was an exciting and memorable end to an eventful Homecoming Week and one that would generate many happy memories in the years to come.

Engaged in lively conversation, Mike Nagao, Jessica Fridrich and Emma Schleede take a refreshment break.

Gathering to share the evening, a group of friends find the chance to relax off the dance floor.

Gotta get back in time

Time travel is only a dream for some, but on October 4 and 5 in the Little Theatre, it became a reality. The Theatre Department's group of actors known as Finnigan's Cat put on a production with a total of about 25 cast and crew members.

Separated into decades from the 1900's on, the Variety Show portrayed life in each time period. The actors brought the stage to life with songs, dances and other musical numbers. "42nd Street", "Friendship", "Easy Street", and "Piano Boogie" were a few such numbers that delighted the audience. These numbers set a tone which brought the past together with the present.

Much time and hard work went into rehearsing such a production. Participants spent approximately 3½ hours a day beginning three weeks before opening night preparing for this show.

Due to the time and effort put in by the members of Finnigan's Cat, this talented group of actors provided the audience with the means of fulfilling the dream of traveling back in time.

Singing a song from the 1920's, Becky Kacenjar and Rich Johnson harmonize to "Never Dressed Without a Smile."

Setting a more solemn tone, Stacey Bennett sings a song from the 1930's.

Bill Cimino, Andy Spage, and Ken Kraus clap to the beat of the music while getting fired up for the Homecoming game.

Firing up spirit

The bonfire was one among many activities during Spirit Week. Spirit Week allowed Lake Braddock students to show some Bruin spirit. The bonfire took place on Wednesday October 9 at 8:00 p.m. on the practice field. Full of fun and spirit, S.G.A. played music as many excited students danced on and around the temporary stage set up near the fire.

The winners of the West Springfield dummy contest were also announced, the seniors taking first place.

Three friends enjoy each other's company at the bonfire.

Representatives of each class then threw their dummies, representing West Springfield football players, one by one into the roaring fire.

Coach Joe Clark and the football team psyched up the crowd with a short speech, and senior Roger Boone said a few words to heighten Bruin Spirit.

Though Spirit Week, beginning October 7 and ending October 11, included a variety of activities such as the dress up days, the pep rally and Fall Follies, the bonfire was a favorite of many students. Not only did it give students a chance to get together before a warm fire, but also it provided students with school unity and pride.

Camping out for leadership

Tradition is an important quality we all take pride in at Lake Braddock.

Our annual gathering at Camp Varsity in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Madison, Va. is one tradition that is respected by all. This special weekend of August 12-13 provided an opportunity for energetic, spirited students, teachers, and parents to discuss new goals and exciting ideas for the upcoming year that would create a stronger school unity and spirit. For example, "Lucky 13," the year's theme, and the Homecoming theme, "Bruins on Broadway" were chosen. Other topics discussed included the need for better student participation, bridging the communication gap, and improving faculty involvement.

Bruins not only learned leadership skills, but they also had plenty of free time to share with each other. Boating, swimming, horseback riding, and even a dance were some of the activities everyone enjoyed. Overall, Camp Varsity, as well as many other traditions, created a unity and spirit unique to Lake Braddock.

Grand finale!

The two things that everyone looks forward to throughout their high school years are graduation and prom. None seemed as excited as the Class of '85.

Their prom, held May 31, 1985 at the Shoreham Hotel, began at 9:00 p.m. and extended well into the evening. A live band provided the music for dancing. An ice-sculpture in the shape of an '85 decorated the room and reminded prom-goers of their upcoming graduation.

Graduation took place on June 6, 1985 in the football stadium. Beautiful weather prevailed as seniors and a host of friends and family members listened to speeches by former teacher Mr. Dale Rumberger, principal Dr. John Alwood, and seniors Chris Elwell and Jeff Ambroziak. This happy yet sad event marked not only an end but also a beginning to the rest of the '85 graduates' lives.

Looking trim and trendy

The 1980's has been a decade where thin is undoubtedly in. The 1985-86 school year was no exception to this rule.

Students filled their spare time working toward a healthy body. Some maintained their trim figures by enrolling in structured dance and aerobic classes and by forming their own exercise routines. Health spas and Nautilus fitness centers were also common places to find health-conscious teens determined to keep themselves in shape.

In addition to looking trim, up-to-date clothing was necessary to stay in style. Those in fashion wore both shirts and slacks printed with stylish paislies or bold plaids. Also, cropped pants and vividly colored, oversized shirts were frequently seen throughout the halls.

Another trend that swept through the school was the returning looks of the 50's and 60's. The comfortable look of jeans, sweatshirts, and jean jackets remained popular.

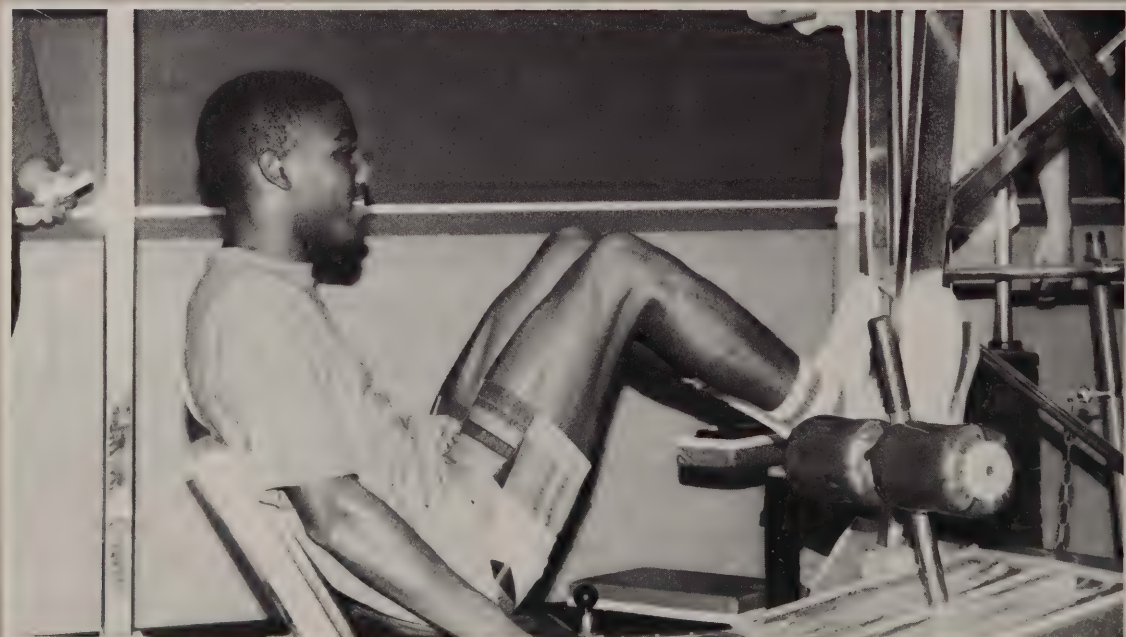

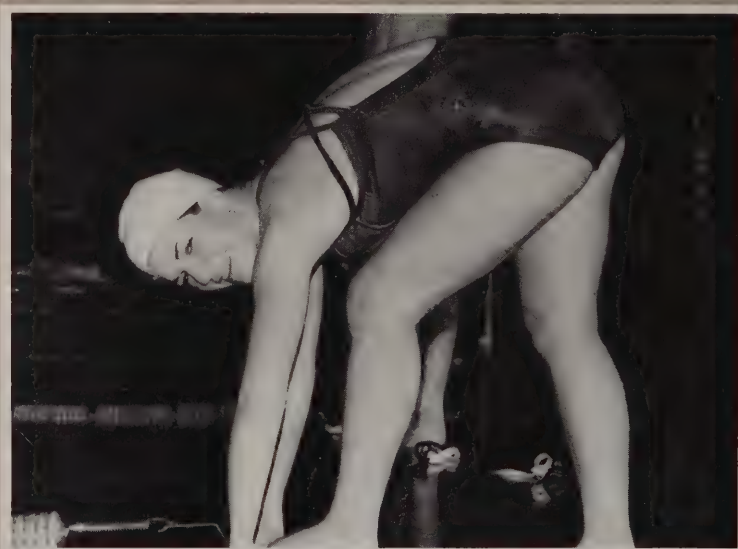

Since Lake Braddock had almost 5000 students enrolled, the trends were constantly changing, so staying fashionable was not an easy task. However, there was still room for individual tastes.

Catching the sites

Northern Virginia suburbs have been expanding greatly in the past few years; and the fastest growing suburb is Burke. Not far from the District of Columbia, Burke provides many activities, nearby shopping centers, libraries and parks.

When in the mood for fun and fitness, Wakefield Recreation Center, Nautilus and Burke Swim and Racquet Club are some of the popular places to get in shape. Burke Lake and Lake Braddock also attract many people with their beautiful scenery for biking, jogging or just hanging out.

Beautiful but hectic D.C. makes for week-end fun and excitement with many historical sites and monuments; the mall, small shops, and of course Georgetown!

Both Burke and D.C. have their advantages. When tired and frustrated from a long, hard day at work, coming home to a more rural community can actually be worth looking forward to. And when in the "partyin' mood," D.C. and Georgetown are the places to hit. They have nice, elegant restaurants, shops, night clubs and bars, pizza parlors and most importantly the beauty and excitement which light up the town!

The grace and beauty of D.C. sparkles on a moonlit night.

What is a friend?

Friend (frend) n. A person who has a real liking for and confidence in another person.

Friends are those who stick with you through the good times and the bad, the wonderful times and the miserable times. Friends are those who enjoy your company, whatever kind of mood you're in. Friends are those who spend time with you in the shopping mall, the movies, a football game, or just between classes. Friends are those who care a lot about you. Friends are those who like you just the way you are. Because the high school years are so special, the friends and the fun times together will never be forgotten. A high school friendship is treasured throughout life.

It was time to unwind after a long year at school, when getting up at the crack of dawn to get to school on time, and staying up late trying to get a history report finished became a thing of the past.

As the school clock struck 2:30 for the last time, it was time for students to relax and enjoy the better things in life. Getting up late, spending a day at the mall, going to the beach to improve the suntan, meeting new friends, and going to parties were a few such luxuries students experienced.

As the summer wore on, more and more Bruins could be found manning the cash register at the local People's Drug or making hamburgers at McDonalds.

Traveling abroad

What is your idea of how to spend an ultimate summer vacation? Some may respond by saying, a trip to Ocean City, a quiet week at the mountains, or a cruise to the exotic islands. However, for some people, last summer was just another summer, while for others it was a summer to remember. As people were getting ready to visit relatives and friends in nearby states, a certain group of people were on their way to another continent, Europe.

AIFS, American International Foreign Studies, sponsored the trip. The group spent two weeks touring Europe and its sites. During their stay in France, London and Switzerland, they got a chance to travel around to famous sites and places and see such things as the Eiffel Tower, Buckingham Palace, Mont St. Michel, Arles Theatre and the Swiss Alps.

In their spare time, they went shopping, wrote postcards, talked to the natives and simply enjoyed the sites. They also got to sample European cuisine.

When asked what was one of the things she liked best about the trip, Deanna Pulice replied, "It was fun getting to experience a different culture and way of life."

In summing it up, the AIFS students gained a valuable experience. The students developed treasured friendships with one another, created special memories and made new bonds between themselves and other Europeans. In their minds and hearts, the students felt this trip was a dream come true.

What is your worst fear while preparing for a date?

- ... There would be nothing to talk about/saying the wrong thing
- ... The date would bomb
- ... What to wear
- ... Having bad breath
- ... Make a fool of themselves
- ... "Do I smell okay?"/"Do I look all right?"
- ... Parents won't like him/her

How old were you when you went on your first date?

| Age | Percent of students polled |
|----------------|----------------------------|
| Under thirteen | 23% |
| Thirteen | 15% |
| Fourteen | 33% |
| Fifteen | 10% |
| Sixteen | 9% |

Bombs and "Most Embarrassing Moments" on dates

"I forgot my money on a date, and after eating I had to call my mom."
"When we were kissing in the movies, we both turned to each other and accidentally bumped heads."
"My date's car stalled in the middle of the beltway."
"The first time anybody asked me out, I asked, 'Why?'"
"I farted."

Julie Sampson and Chris Ferraiuolo top and smile as they chat about their plans for the upcoming weekend.

Jill Slezak and Dan Gregorio enjoy each other's company.

Helpful hints for a date.

- Looking for a "special place" to take a date? Why not try something traditional, like out to dinner or to a movie.
- Want a pleasant and romantic atmosphere? A stroll around a lake or down a beach just might be the place.
- Feeling energetic? Share a few laughs ice skating, dancing, or bowling.
- Can't find the "right place" to spend an evening? Why not stay at home and plan a romantic dinner and a movie for just the two of you.
- Still lost for ideas? How about spending a day touring D.C. Whether it turns out to be a "bomb" date, or an evening full of fun, any place you go will provide lasting memories.

Dating can be painful if you're willing to start, but no one is asking! You might have even thought to yourself, "Even garbage gets taken out!" But remember, you're not alone. One in every ten students polled had not experienced the ups and downs of dating yet, but were waiting for their time to come. Hopefully, it'll have been worth all the waiting when you have found this "perfect" guy or girl!

Moving to the beat

On Friday or Saturday nights, the cafeteria doors opened and swarms of people filled the dance floor ready to celebrate any occasion from Back to School to a beach party. Sponsored by either the individual classes or the SGA, soc-hops let the students wind down from a difficult school week and let loose!

Disc-jockeys such as those from Soundtech, provided a variety of music that let everyone move to the beat, such as pop, rock, punk, and favorite oldies including "Shout," and "Rock Lobster." Taking a break off the dance floor, students rested on the Senior stage or quenched their thirst with a refreshing glass of Coke. The "come as you are" attire offered a casual atmosphere as students arrived in anything from jeans to jams.

Soc-hops offered the chance for best buddies to get together and share some laughs and good times. Dances also provided the opportunity to meet new people and see new faces. The nights were filled with fond memories and special new friendships.

Tim Rascoll and Mindy Parker enjoy each other's company as they sway to the music at the Back to School dance.

Laughter and friendship are what Marcy Buskirk and Robyn Gurinsky like best at school dances.

Making

Involved with school security, Mr. Wertz is kept informed about the plans for the new road.

The new Burke Lake Road will be passing through the baseball practice fields and taking up a few student parking spaces.

Area expands

In a few short years the downtown Burke area will not exist quite as it is known today. Burke has expanded rapidly the past ten years. As the population has grown, so has the traffic problem. A plan for the reconstruction of Burke Lake Road which has been proposed and accepted will provide a new route through Burke for commuters.

The new Burke Lake Road will be re-routed, causing it to cut through part of Lake Braddock's baseball fields. Also, this road will cut through part of the twenty student parking spaces along the entrance to the school. Continuing through the Raintree development, the new Burke Lake Road will overpass the railroad tracks, cut through the two shopping centers and will rejoin the old Burke Lake Road after the bridge. The old Burke Lake Road will become a cul-de-sac in front of the school and will be used only for local traffic. Though Lake Braddock will suffer a few losses such as the baseball field and the parking spaces, the road is generally considered to be worth the trouble. Recognizing the traffic problem in Burke, Mr. Vic Wertz, working with Lake Braddock security, commented, "We can't stand in the way of progress. Think of how many more people the road will benefit than it will hurt."

Lake Braddock students will have to adjust to the minor inconveniences, though overall the road will benefit a great many people. It is a problem that everyone must learn to face in a greatly expanding area such as Burke.

Students promote awareness

Today's world will one day fall into the hands of today's youth, and all the problems the world faces must then fall on their shoulders. S.U.P.A. recognized that fact.

S.U.P.A., Student Union to Promote Awareness, is modeled after the S.U.P.A. from Bethesda Chevy-Chase High School, which is designed to educate its members on the problems of the world.

Because Lake Braddock's S.U.P.A. organization has just begun, the group started with what its members call teach-ins. In a teach-in a member is assigned a topic to research including such topics as Nicaragua, communism, the arms race, AIDS, and animal rights. The member then shares the information with the group.

Aside from teach-ins, the S.U.P.A.

will invite speakers to help them learn more of the problems of the world and what they as a group can do to help.

Though primarily an educational group, S.U.P.A. also participates in outside events such as protests, conferences, lectures or movies.

"This group helps students to make themselves aware of issues outside school. S.U.P.A. is important because it shows that the individual can be effective and the youth of today is not totally apathetic," commented member Lisa Mulholland.

Though the Lake Braddock branch of S.U.P.A. is just getting on its feet, S.U.P.A. provides the chance for students to learn more about the problems they will one day inherit and how they as students and individuals can make a difference.

Working to the rule

This year teachers began coming to work later and leaving earlier than usual in protest of low pay. Since striking is illegal in the state of Virginia, Fairfax Education Association members chose this option, called Work to the Rule, almost unanimously. With 95% of the FEA members who voted behind this option, Work to the Rule went into effect Wednesday, December 4th, 1985.

Work to the Rule asked teachers to work only the required 7½ hour day. This meant being at school at 8:00 a.m. and leaving precisely at 3:30 p.m. Teachers were asked not to do any volunteer work, such as chaperoning dances and organizing field trips. Also, teachers were not to grade tests or homework at home. The purpose of Work to the Rule was to persuade the School Board to give the teachers a raise.

They stressed "students first, system later," though many students did not feel that this was the case. "I need teacher recommendations in order to apply to colleges. I can't get those if teachers work to the rule, and I have no other way to get them," commented one distressed senior. "I support higher pay for teachers, but I'm against Work to the Rule. I think the teachers are needlessly hurting the students," commented another student.

Despite student complaints, the FEA continued with Work to the Rule, determined to attain their pay proposal. Though each had individual opinions on Work to the Rule, everyone's hopes were toward seeking a mutually acceptable and speedy solution.

Students campaign

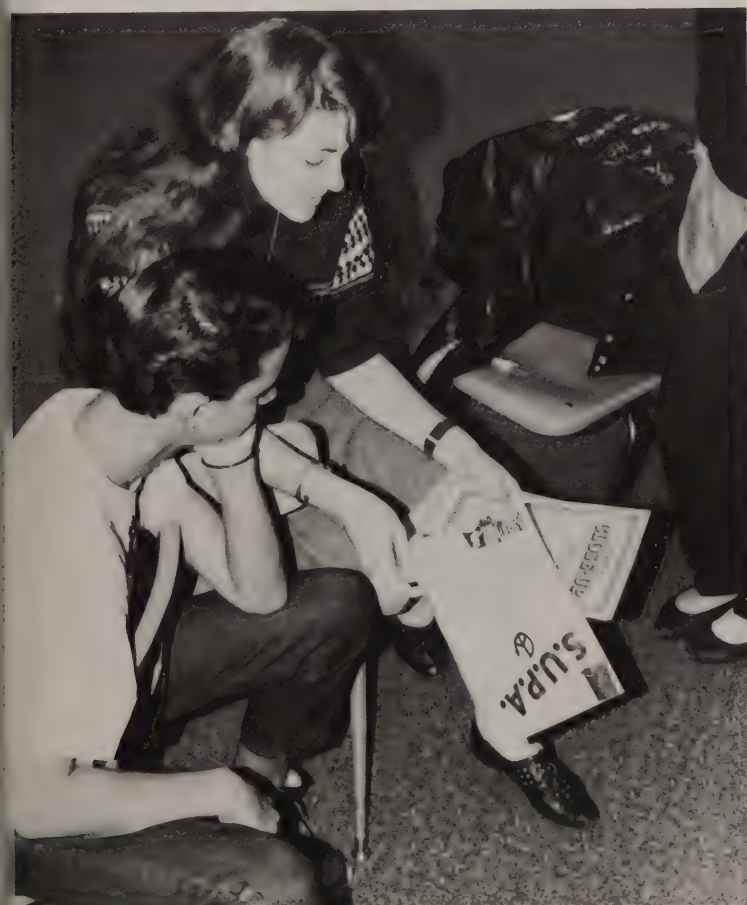

Elephants, donkeys, posters, bumper stickers — everywhere one went these signs of the upcoming elections could be seen. Virginia, one of the few states to hold off-year elections, prepared itself to elect new state officials on November 5th. Among the offices up for election were the Attorney General, the Lieutenant Governor and the Governor. Many Lake Braddock students under voting age ignored this election, but not the senior class. As seniors were required to take government, they were also required to do election projects. As a part of the project many students had to do volunteer work for a particular candidate or political party. This volunteer work included anything from doing telephone polling, delivering campaign materials doorto-door, attending rallies, or marching with signs.

The government classes were not the only things that stirred up the students to get involved. Political science classes, the Young Republicans and the Young Democrats also got students involved. "All the volunteer work was worth it. It helped me find where I can fit into politics and what I can do to help," commented government student, political science student and Young Democrats member Marni Hochman.

The volunteer work provided students with some first-hand knowledge on the working of politics. It also helped spark political interest in many students; students who may one day be the future's politicians.

pastimes; catching a flick, going to the mall, hanging out at the lake, looking for parties, or cruising down to Georgetown and D.C. to cash in on some real fun and excitement. On rainy days, everyone seemed to meet at Erol's to rent out a movie for a night at home with the gang.

Amadeus comes to life

As lights dimmed and the curtains opened, the theatre came to life with the thrilling sounds of classical music and the triumphant production of Amadeus. On November 12-16, the Department of Theatre Arts presented the enchanting play by Peter Shaffer which vividly described the musical conflicts between Antonio Salieri and Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. The production portrayed the colorful life of Mozart and the events which led to his tragic and untimely death. The role of the antagonist Salieri was magnificently played by Andy Knighton and Mike Rosenberg. The talented Mozart was brought to life by Mike Sunner and Mike Saltzman. Laura Siedentopf and Margie Leahy captured the character of the lovely Constanze, Mozart's young wife. The supporting cast also contributed greatly to the smashing success of the production.

In addition to superb acting, the staging of the drama was highly professional. The authentic costuming and exquisite scenery definitely contributed to the magnificent production. The music and special effects were also superb.

The production of Amadeus will long be remembered in the theatrical history of Lake Braddock.

Competing for fun

Class Nite! An evening that is filled with fun and excitement for everyone. This year it took place in the gym on Saturday, February 1, 1986.

The classes of Lake Braddock competed against each other in various games, including Simon Says, the Egg on the Spoon, the Hot Dog Doughnut Pass, the Wheelbarrow Race, Tug-of-War, the Five-Legged Race, and the Bat Game. Also, the childhood game of Musical Chairs provided more laughter as well as friendly competition among the students.

The ultimate goal of the night's activities was to achieve the title "most spirited" class of Lake Braddock. It wasn't an ordinary school event; it was a special time for students and faculty to gather together and participate, watch, or simply cheer on their fellow classmates as they strived towards victory.

Senior Sasha Stowell said, "Class spirit really showed through, and the joint effort of the classes gave the class of '86 tough competition." But the seniors fought a hard battle which resulted in a moment of triumph. The juniors took a close second and the freshmen placed third.

The night proved to be successful as well as spectacular and school pride as well as class spirit was felt by all.

Rock and roll wonderland

This year the "post Christmas blahs" were happily interrupted on January 18 with the first winter formal in the history of Lake Braddock Secondary School.

The cafeteria was magically transformed into a winter wonderland of blue and silver decorations. The balloons and snowflakes dangling from the ceiling provided the perfect atmosphere for this occasion. The Snowball Dance attracted a turnout of 300 students.

Dancing to the live music of Mr. Bill Cabrera's band Nightmusic and sparkling conversation shared among friends contributed to the aura of the evening. Jeff Davis commented, "The band was great and it was really fun to see all my friends having such a super time."

Because of the smashing success of the evening, the Snowball Dance could perhaps become a Lake Braddock tradition.

Making plans to meet after the dance are Katie Gaffney, Marc DeBéarn, Laura Siedentopf and Kris Kritzer.

Performing on a grand scale

WLBS, Lake Braddock's very own radio station, was organized and staffed entirely by students. About 25-30 students in seventh through twelfth grades were responsible for providing the student body with a variety of music for their lunchtime entertainment.

The idea originated with senior Adam Perna and was coordinated by Ken Mikeman, who commented, "Basically everyone working on WLBS is having a good time and it's giving exposure to the people who haven't had anything to do with broadcasting." With the help of their sponsor, Mr. Steve Kewer, the students were able to turn WLBS into a real production. Jenny Malone remarked, "The students have responded with a positive reaction. Though many people opt for certain styles of songs, most understand that because of the variety of music tastes WLBS has to play many different has to play many different songs in order to please the majority."

Another group of musically oriented students was the Lake Braddock Fine Arts Quintet which was comprised of four musicians. Their former member Rob Wright, who played the bass, graduated last year.

Some of the more prominent places they performed were at a Democratic national fundraiser with Governor Robb, the Fort Belvoir Officers Club and at the Roma in Washington D.C. They played classical, Baroque, and contemporary music when requested, but their specialty was Mozart quartets.

They formed in 1981 for a faculty function and in the words of Ben Warner, "What was supposed to have been a one night stand turned into a 'relationship'."

Catching that holiday spirit

Happy Holidays! The holiday season is a time of joy, a time of happiness, and a time for relaxation and vacation when families come together and peace is called the world over.

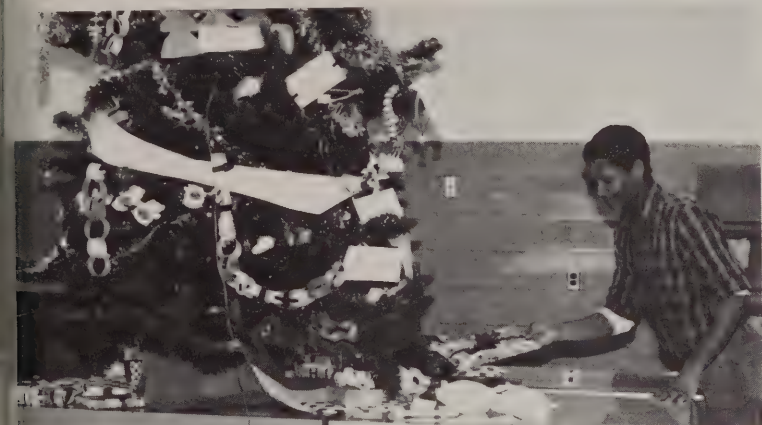

The holiday season began early at Lake Braddock, with both teachers and students joining together to decorate the school with seasonal cheer — and everyone going crazy with anticipation of coming events.

Christmas was not the only holiday celebrated this season. Hannukah, which lasted eight full days, was celebrated too. During this period, the children received presents each day in addition to lighting a candle on the Menorah.

This year Santa brought a variety of presents to the houses of Lake Braddock's students. Some students received skis, some clothes, and others a new watch, but the one thing that everyone received was two weeks of relaxation in which they were free to do what they pleased. All in all, students looked forward to the holidays as a chance to relieve the routine of the school year.

Many students utilized their hobby of biking as a way of transportation.

Revealing individuality

Lake Braddock's halls were filled with students who displayed a wide variety of hobbies and talents. Ranging from physical activities to collections, hobbies were a relaxing way to spend free time and to get one's mind off school work.

Some people took their hobbies more seriously than others. For example, ice skater Erin Sasaki, a sophomore, practiced daily as a competitive figure skater, while horseback rider Monica Wang, a seventh grader, enjoyed riding every Saturday. Gretchen Grozier took running seriously because, "I'm better at it than anything else I do and I like it." Julie Minton stayed with competitive gymnastics simply because, "I love it!" Sophomore Katie Prosser enjoyed diving because, "It's a challenge to learn new dives. Although half the time you end up smacking, it's still fun."

Most people had diverse talents and enjoyed a wide variety of activities. These people used free time, such as vacations, to work on their hobbies. Such hobbies provided students with the opportunity to express their personality and individuality. Many found hobbies rewarding and entertaining, plus they could be enjoyed throughout a lifetime.

Shaping up for summer, Noelle Conrad exercises at a nearby health club.

During English class, Ken Marcus is stunned when the teacher finds him reading.

After a hard day at school, a group of friends gather together and talk about the upcoming weekend.

Locking it up

The halls of Lake Braddock are lined with unusual orange and blue metal boxes called lockers.

For some students, lockers were a place to dump papers and books, for others they were their pride and joy. Everything from posters and pictures of favorite people to magnetic mirrors decorated these storage bins.

Many times lockers were decorated in the spirit of holidays or birthdays. Wrapping paper, tinsel, crepe paper, balloons and candy were some of the common decorations.

Due to the large number of students in Lake Braddock, having your own locker was a real privilege. For seniors, getting lockers meant one step closer to graduation, while for seventh graders, it was a new experience. Though they had to deal with the hassels of forgotten combinations or broken lockers for the first time, seventh graders were thankful for this new privilege.

Be it morning, after school or between classes, lockers also provided a place where students could convene and talk about the day's activities and upcoming events.

Each student valued his locker, for it provided the chance to express personality through decorations, and gave students a place they could call their own.

Before the first bell of the day, Steve Perkins, Marc Pino, and Yuri Kim talk about the past weekend.

Getting ready to go home and relax is Michelle Kim.

Getting the job done

"A job is like a preview of the real world," commented junior Debbie Olitsky, an employee of Hair Magic. Many students of the eleventh and twelfth grades also discovered this while working at their jobs. Employment opportunities ranged from working behind the grill at McDonald's to helping take care of pets at the Burke Veterinary Clinic.

These jobs were more than just a source of money or a reference for a college application, because students gained knowledge, and a sense of freedom. "I like my job," said senior Terri Marcoux, "The hours are great and my weekends are still free!"

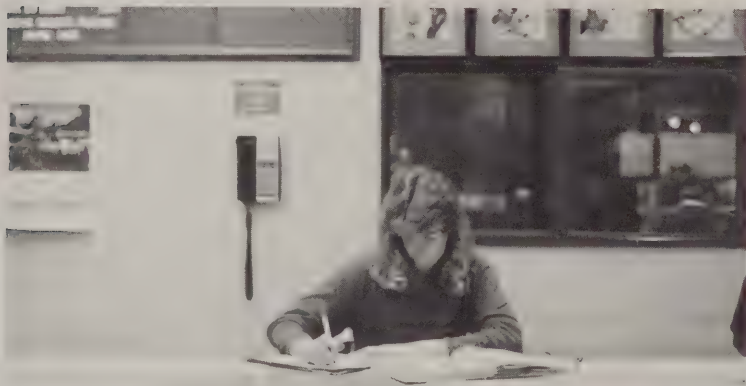

Some students even worked at jobs with no salary. Stephanie Backman who worked as a volunteer at her church teaching kindergarteners, commented, "I love the kids and they love me. It's a lot of fun!"

Students held jobs that were important to the community, such as teaching handicapped children how to swim, or lifeguarding for their neighborhood swimming pools.

Part-time employment enabled kids to get a taste of responsibility. Students had to be punctual, efficient and accurate in their duties to advance to higher positions. Darby Robeson found this out by working her way up to manager at the Shoe Town in Springfield. "I basically started working for the money," she said, "But now I work because it's my job."

Excitement builds as a group of friends await the end of the week.

Monday versus Friday

After a weekend of fun, friends, and parties, the beginning of the school week inevitably arrives. With it, comes the Monday Blues. A Monday Blues victim is characterized by his half-closed eyes with dark circles under them. Most victims arrive at school late, wearing sweats or whatever else they could put on with eyes closed.

Dragging into school carrying unfinished homework, a Monday Blues victim has a terrible day. Lockers that refuse to open, impossible tests to take, and books that suddenly disappear are just a few such catastrophes Monday Blues victims face.

As the school week continues, the Monday Blues victim begins to transform. By the middle of the week his eyes are beginning to open, and a half-smile begins to appear on his face.

By the time Friday arrives, the Monday Blues victim is completely transformed. Laughing and smiling, the former victim bounces into school greeting everyone. Rowdy and loud, he impatiently awaits the weekend, during which he will attend parties and go out with friends. All of this is continuous, for as soon as Monday morning arrives again, the Friday Fanatic has again become a victim of the Monday Blues.

ACADEMICS

“It’s what learning is all about,” replied Dr. John Alwood when asked how he felt about academics in our school. With the assistance of Associate Principal Dr. Richard Lavine, teachers, and a cadre of students, Lake Braddock became the high academic success it is today.

From 8:15 A.M. to 2:30 P.M., students were challenged with various courses pertaining to math, science, history, and English. Numerous foreign languages were also taught to keep a student’s academic day varied. With the number of vocational classes at Lake Braddock increasing yearly, students received help in securing a career by taking such courses as child development, cosmetology, and industrial arts. Making up a large portion of the student body, the many different bands played a key role in the character of the school. The hard-working vocal groups also played a part of this role. Actors and actresses were given an opportunity to express themselves through the school’s excellent theater arts program.

Special thanks go to the maintenance, custodial, and cafeteria crews who dexterously worked to make each academic day successful.

With such a diverse group of people and classes, one can definitely tell that academically, little things mean a lot in a school our size.

Becoming new and improved

Being "new and improved" was definitely the goal of the 1986 Lair staff. The approach was apparent in the class, which had many students who were entirely new to yearbook, including two new sponsors, Mrs. Sandy Miller and Mr. John Leahy.

Patty Riek had been editor-in-chief for four years, but this year the Lair had two new head editors, Variny Yim and Cindy Downing (who plan on sponsoring the yearbook in ten years).

Even though yearbook students had been chosen for their creative writing skills, they spent the first two weeks of class learning the correct styles for headlines, articles, and layouts. After the format of the yearbook had been mastered, students set out to produce the ultimate yearbook. There were deadlines to be met, interviews to be set, sleep nobody could get — not until the final page of the yearbook had been perfected.

With the pictures from seven experienced student photographers, the staff members set out to pick special moments throughout the year to present in the Lair. "It's been a lot of work, but it's also lots of fun, and you get to meet a lot of people," commented staff member Cheryl Garrity.

After the initial work was over, distribution of the Lair began. The students then had a chance to take pride in their hard work and efforts to make little things mean a lot as the rest of Lake Braddock got the opportunity to share in the final product.

Meet the press

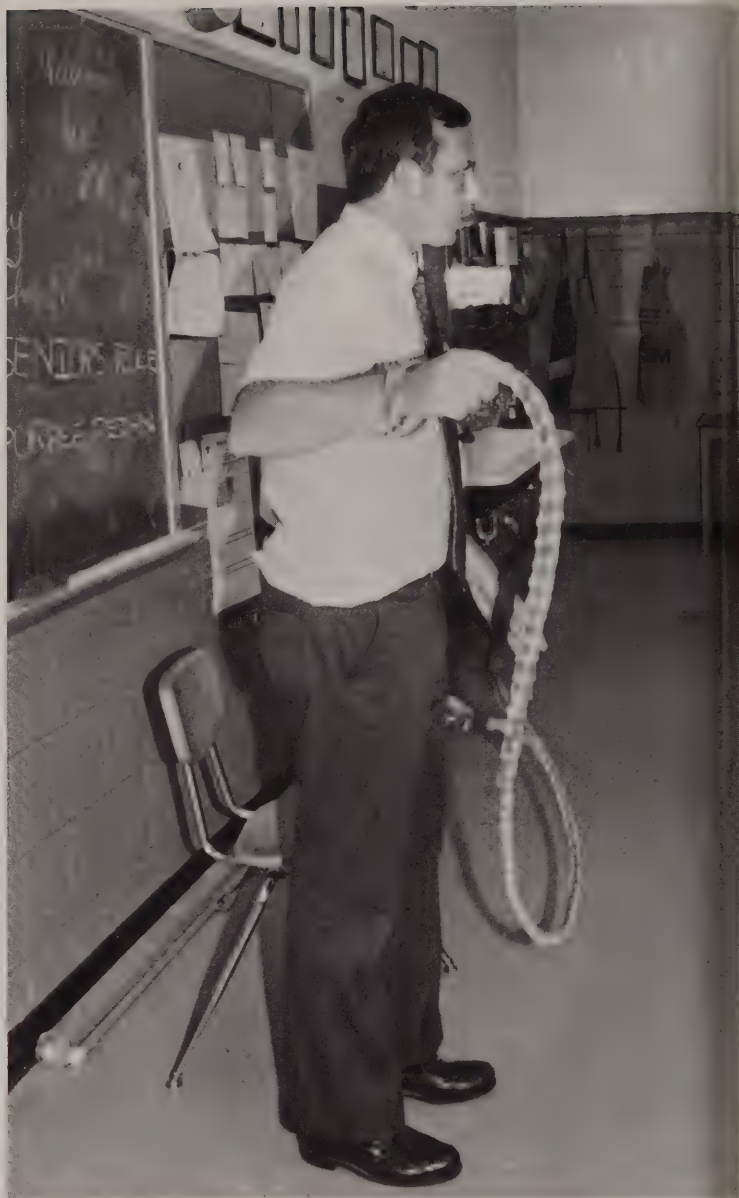

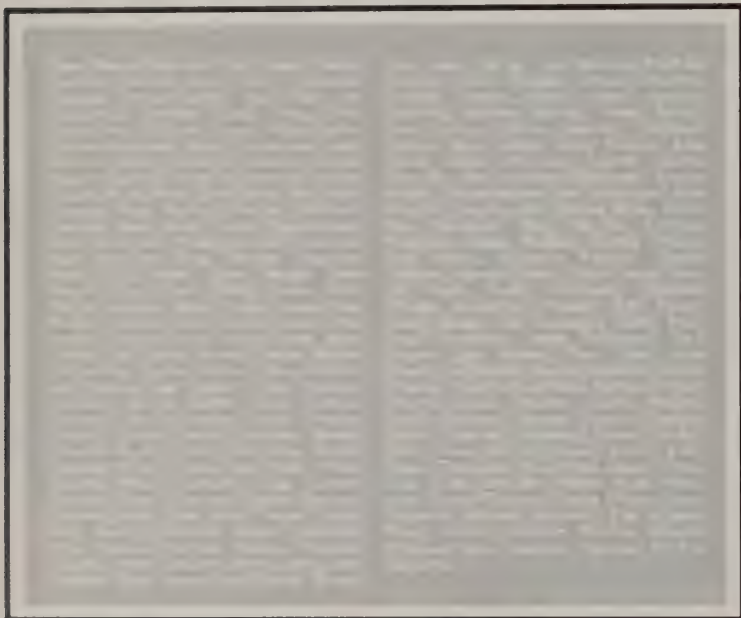

“Journalism has given me an idea for a career,” remarked Kathy Folk. Unlike journalism classes at other schools, writing wasn’t the only thing required to produce a newspaper. The Bear Facts was one of the few student produced newspapers where students did everything from photography and computer typesetting, to putting address labels on newspapers and mailing them home. What made the program one of the largest in the nation was the atmosphere of being on a real newspaper staff.

“Deadline Day” came often since the Bear Facts was produced every two weeks, more frequently than any other school newspaper in the county.

“Our staff, this year, was one of the best ever and everybody really contributed to making every issue look great,” stated Stacey Harris, editor-in-chief of the Bear Facts.

This year Mr. John Leahy was added to Dr. Pat McCarthy’s fifth period class along with Mrs. Mary White, a teacher aid. Another addition was the “Wizard Workshop and Company.” They consisted of senior computer programmers who designed all the programs that ran journalism. They commented, “The Bear Facts will never be the same without us.”

On the first day of school, Dr. McCarthy explains to his students that there is not much discipline in Journalism.

Training for the future

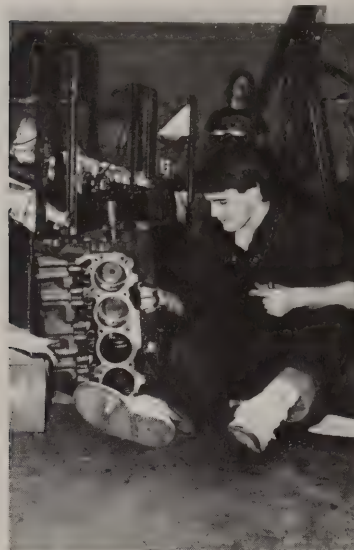

Students interested in learning a trade were offered many different classes through the Vocational Department. These classes gave the students a hands-on learning experience where they could learn and apply their skills to their specific interests. Whether it was changing a muffler in auto mechanics or making a quiche in a home economics class, the students learned an art that would last a lifetime.

Another class offered through the Vocational Arts Program was Cosmetology where one could learn how to work on hair in an actual functioning salon. Or one could teach and entertain young children in a child development class. If so inclined, one could learn many different technical skills, such as welding, repairing engines or fixing electrical equipment. "Transportation Technology enabled me to keep my car running and on the road," said Mike Fine of Mr. Lou Patch's Transportation Technology class.

The Art Department gave students a chance to express their unique styles which are reflected in paintings along the school's walls. These classes gave students a chance to learn and develop useful skills which would help them in their careers.

Studying verbs and vouchers

“Hola! Bonjour! Gутten Tag! Salve!”

These were just some of the expressions that welcomed students every day as they entered their foreign language classes. Teachers and students alike did not seem to notice any overcrowded classes. However, more people than ever took a foreign language.

Besides learning a foreign language, there were several activities in which to participate. Some teachers organized “cultural experiences” in which students celebrated the holidays observed in different cultures — one of the most popular being Christmas. Trips to Spain and Italy were among those planned to let pupils enjoy the sights and sounds of other cultures.

Taking a foreign language required a great deal of work and devotion, as did participating in the Cooperative Office Education program. Cooperative Office Education, or COE, was a business program designed to let students work in an office occupation as an extension of classroom instruction. One of the more popular aspects of the COE program was that students could take classes in the morning and work in the afternoon in the place of their choice, receiving wages comparable to other beginning part-time employees. Commented COE head Mrs. Teresa King Fleming, “The COE program prepares anyone, to do anything, in any business!”

Cleaning up the act

The S.G.A. (Student Government Association) and S.A.C. (Student Advisory Council) goals both stressed the cleanliness of the community. This cleanliness started in the S.G.A. room. Plus they held both Fall and Spring Beautification days. The S.A.C. put their efforts into improving the restrooms. "The reason I took an interest in S.A.C. was like the saying goes, 'If it's not being done right, do it yourself,'" stated Barbie Eddlemon.

But this was only a part of the student executives busy schedule. The S.G.A. also sponsored and organized the Homecoming events, Class Night, the Sadie Hawkins dance, Spring Fling, Special Olympics, the Magazine Drive, and morning announcements. "S.G.A. is a great opportunity to express your school spirit and learn how a school is run," stated Sasha Walker, the class of '89's student government representative.

The S.A.C.'s purpose was to communicate with other schools about student dilemmas. The main issues that were worked on this year were student rights and responsibilities, "C" average requirement for after-school activities, the G.T.P. (Gifted and Talented Program), and teenage suicide. When asked why she decided to run for office Amy Schleede replied, "I really didn't know what the whole purpose of the S.A.C. was, but I knew I'd enjoy working with other schools."

As a way of making the student body aware of the S.A.C.'s purpose and to get more student input, the S.A.C. conducted studies on the various topics of the year. This helped them know how the student body would like to be represented and contrasting views to keep in mind.

When asked what he thought made the S.G.A. and S.A.C. so popular, Skip Griffith, president of the S.G.A. replied, "It gives people a chance to get involved in school events and exercise planning and leadership abilities in a casual atmosphere."

During a senior assembly, Chelly Elliot and Lynn Calvert pass out ballots regarding the choosing of the Homecoming court.

The S.A.C. shows enthusiasm over their proposed strategy for Lake Braddock.

Together, Katie Gaffney and Lydia Morris make a poster to inform the student body about what the individual days of Spirit Week are.

Meaningful people and places

With an ever-growing student body, a number of extra classes had to be added this year to accommodate the large numbers.

The class of '88, with its 945 members, formed the largest in LBSS history.

Even with boundary changes, and the reduced population of Subschools I and II, there were still 4743 students in a school that was originally intended to hold only 3900.

With the large amount of students, this school was the ideal place for peer counselors.

"A school like Lake Braddock is a prime place for peer counselors. The high quality of students here who are concerned enough about others to help them, combined with the positive support from our administration and faculty, makes this school the perfect environment for a cooperative effort like peer counseling," remarked Mrs. Carla Watson, coordinator of the peer counseling program.

"The class provided a safe environment for me to take a good look at myself as well as others," stated Lisa Comstock. In group discussions, the class shared their feelings, thoughts, and emotions.

A tough act to follow

a time. Preparations involved memorizing lines, making costumes, and building and painting scenery.

A new addition to the theater program included the two year technical course, designed to teach interested students how to operate lights, wire sound, and create special effects in theater production.

A great deal of effort was required in theater, but according to drama student Bill Begert, “Theater has taught all of us in drama a lot and we made friends and had fun, too!”

Here comes treble!

Teachers of a successful music program start teaching students at the earliest age possible. Their job is to get students interested in being musicians and to encourage them to practice every day. It depends on the teacher's motivational skills as to how many intermediates actually stay with the music program and move on to perform in the high school.

This year, as in the past, the intermediate music department had many members. More than two-hundred and fifty seventh and eighth graders were enrolled in the program. The programs of study for the intermediates included three bands, two vocal groups, two orchestras, and percussion and guitar classes.

Parents, teachers, and other students had a number of opportunities to watch the intermediates perform during the school year. The bands played in three separate concerts, as did the orchestras and vocal groups. All in all, the intermediates had a big responsibility on their shoulders. "They are the next generation of the Lake Braddock Music Department, and have quite a reputation to uphold," remarked Mr. John Lacava, director of the intermediate bands.

Strumming it up

Practice ... practice ... practice ... and more practice. Students in Mrs. Caroline Shaw's orchestra classes demonstrated their dedication with many long and hard hours of work after school. This was a prerequisite for participating in the many outstanding performances the orchestra gave throughout the school year.

Some of their memorable performances included playing at the Lincoln Center, doing The Orchestra Pops Concert, and playing in Regional Orchestra. To help pay for their many performances and trips, the orchestra classes conducted a number of fund raisers, which included selling cheese, sausage and candy.

As Mrs. Shaw commented, "Symphonic and Chamber Orchestra practice during different periods of the school day, but perform together as one on stage." These two classes were made up of mainly high school students, while Concert and Intermediate Orchestra consisted of seventh and eighth graders.

While listening to his teacher, Rob Allgaier concentrates on playing his violin.

Hitting the high notes

Mrs. Suzy Slosky's and Mr. Bob Stambach's Symphonic Chorale, Concert Choir and Intermediate Chorale were three of the many chorale classes that the Music Department offered this year. In these classes students learned to refine their singing talents. To be a member of one of these groups all that was needed was some effort, some talent, and a lot of enthusiasm. Students loved this class because they could apply their abilities in shows and performances.

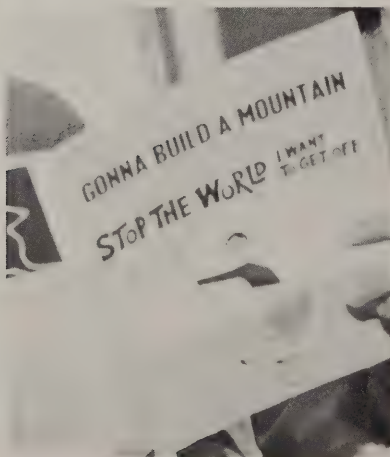

The Choruses are divided into four parts, soprano and alto; the higher scales are sung usually by girls, while tenor and bass are mostly sung by the boys. All these groups participated in Christmas and Spring shows as well as many regional competitions.

Over the last year of rehearsals and practices, these students have gained a greater understanding of music, and their dedication was reflected through all their hard work.

Fully swinging singers

With each day starting at 7:20, the sixteen swing singers had a full seven period day ahead of them.

The program did, however, have many advantages. The singers traveled abroad frequently. One of the most prominent events of the year was the trip made to the Dominican Republic in late January and early February. The money needed for this trip was raised by performing at business affairs and other events.

While in the Dominican Republic, the singers boarded with host families.

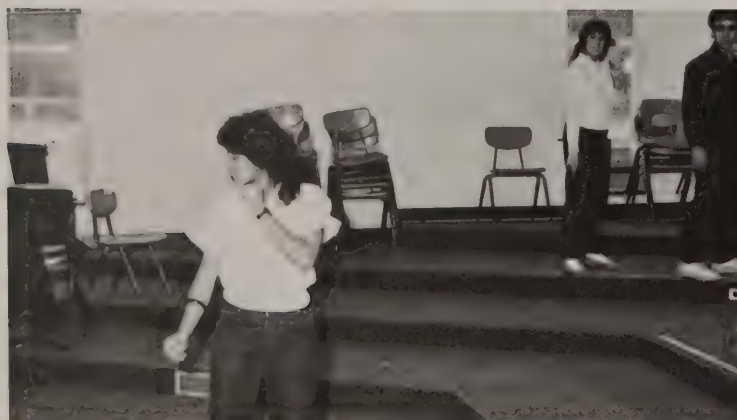

During their stay, they had many important performances, including performing at the Embassy and for the Ambassador. The vocalists also performed for the President of the Dominican Republic. Though this was the most acknowledged of the year's events, many other things also occurred. They did their Broadway-type show at Rotary Clubs, luncheons, and business parties. They performed at the Old Post Office Pavillion and many hotels and conferences throughout our area.

These were among the many outstanding performances which kept the singers busy throughout this school year.

Concentrating intently, Charlene Carabeo perfects a new piece.

Katie Moyer and Mae Carabeo work towards making a new routine flawless.

Driving force describes principal

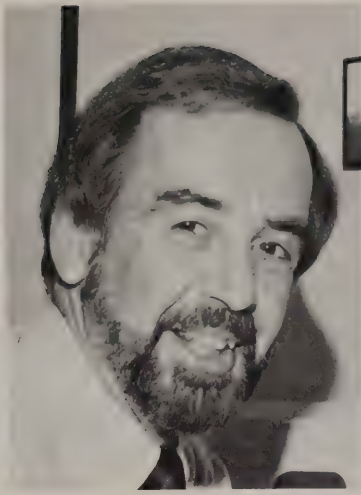

After speaking with Dr. John Alwood, one could easily come to the conclusion that he's a very accomplished man. Before becoming a principal, which he is now and has been for the last twenty-two years, Dr. Alwood was a math teacher. While teaching, he also liked coaching basketball and baseball. According to Dr. Alwood, "the teachers at Lake Braddock are very interested in the students. It's hard for academics to compete for each students' interests, with television and sports, but our school is getting even better every year." Dr. Alwood also noticed that the students need to not only concentrate on their studies, but to also take an interest in the social aspects of the school and to be involved in these happenings. These philosophies have, according to Dr. Alwood, "made our school and county the strong community which it is." They have also made Dr. Alwood the driving force behind Lake Braddock.

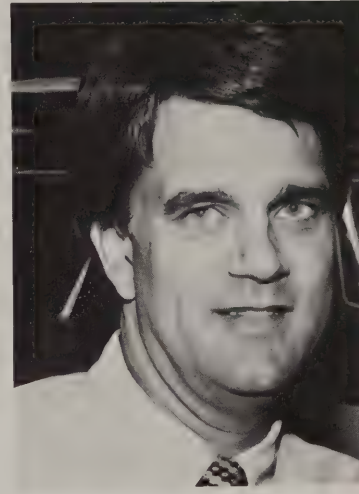

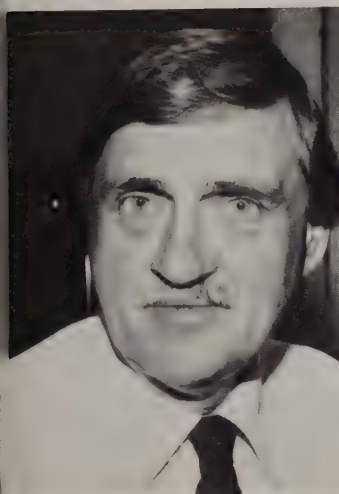

Big man; small profile

Associate Principal Dr. Richard Lavine is not a name one frequently hears at Lake Braddock. Even though he is not often heard of, Dr. Lavine is a very important man in the functioning of Lake Braddock.

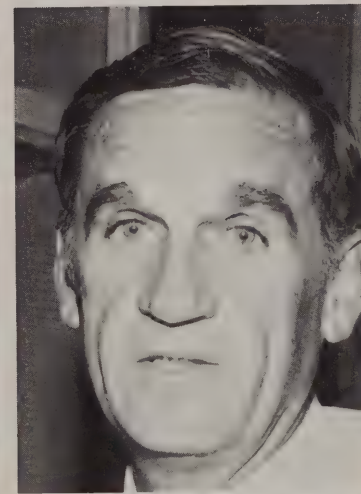

Dr. Lavine is a man of high standards. He sets goals for himself as well as goals for making our school a better institution for learning. His main goal for the school was "to let students have more access to computers for learning." He stated that this is "very, very important in the future of the students." Finally, he believes that Lake Braddock is an "excellent school." "One," he says, "which has great teachers and students as well."

Making history in English

Last October something unusual occurred between a seventh grade English teacher, and a seventh grade social studies teacher. The former team of Ms. Kay Ellis and Mr. G. J. Tarazi changed to Mr. and Mrs. Tarazi. "It was a growing love. I fell in love with him watching him teach," was Mrs. Tarazi's response. Another unusual thing about the marriage, was the fact that the husband of eighth grade math teacher Mrs. Beverly Fleming, wedded the two. "One day after class, Kay came up to me and asked if my husband would marry her and G.J. I talked it over with him, and he said he would be honored." After the wedding, though, the question of who would be leaving the school arose (since county policy prohibits teachers who are married to work together). The decision was made that Mr. Tarazi was to go and become a counselor at another school. As far as the students were concerned, "no significant signs of different treatment have been observed." Also, their lives as teachers have not changed drastically, "except that we spend a lot more time talking about teaching than before," according to Mrs. Tarazi.

After a long day of teaching, Mr. and Mrs. Tarazi look forward to relaxing together at home.

English department honored

Early this fall, the National Commission on Excellence in Education told Americans "Our nation is at risk . . . the educational foundations of our society are presently being eroded by a rising tide of mediocrity that threatens our very future as a nation and a people."

The Commission set out to recognize superior schools as Centers of Excellence in English Language Arts. On November 25, 1985, Lake Braddock was designated as one of these outstanding schools by the National Council of Teachers of English.

720 schools applied for recognition.

Proudly displayed, a certificate of achievement is presented to the English Department.

tion. Out of these, only 150 were honored. As a commission spokesman noticed, very few of these were new institutions. "They've been around during all of the studies, all of the reports, all of the recent reforms. But they went unnoticed because so few people were asking the right questions of the right people. Too few investigators have tried to find out what does work in the teaching of English."

Lake Braddock definitely knows what its doing, said Fairfax County School Superintendent Dr. Robert Spillane. "I am excited for Lake Braddock and its excellent faculty and student body. I'm not surprised, Lake Braddock has had a reputation for excellence for many years. It's nice to see the school get national attention."

Movin' on up

Recently a new system was developed by the Lake Braddock counselors in which they "move-up" with each of the classes and remain the counselors for a class throughout its high school years.

The purpose of this was "so students and counselors are familiar with each other before the year begins, and so that the student will feel comfortable right away," according to tenth grade counselor Manny Bartolotta. One of the counselors who suggested the idea was Mrs. Diane Colvin. As a teacher she realized the emotional needs of the students and found the system "much more efficient." She said the hardest part of being a counselor was the frustration when she could not help a student as much as she wanted. "I can't, unfortunately, be everybody's mother." In addition to counseling, Mrs. Colvin was involved with group counseling, and the C.O.P.S. testing program for career planning. "Seeing that I love kids so much, I hope this new plan can benefit both the students and the counselors," were Mrs. Colvin's words on the new policy.

Fitness mania

As students soon began realizing every Friday, a new definition of fitness had evolved. If it wasn't push-ups, sit-ups, or sprints, students were sure to be challenged with various obstacle courses and long-distance running.

This new idea of a "Fitness Friday" originated at a Fairfax County physical education meeting at which instructors expressed feelings that their students were not properly fit. They decided to dedicate one day a week to total fitness. Thus, Fitness Friday was born.

"It's a lot of hard work, but it's also a lot of fun," replied freshman David Lambert when asked his opinion on Fitness Friday. Since then, Fitness Friday has built up quite a reputation for itself here at Lake Braddock. The Fitness Friday T-shirt worn by the coaches, and the new attitude towards fitness shown by the students, have both made this a successful event.

Coach Brian Sonnek summed things up when he commented, "I think it's a great idea, because students now get a lot more fitness in their P.E. period."

Enthusiastically displaying his spirit for "Fitness Friday," seventh grader Jake Johnson prepares for a challenging but fun workout.

A clean sweep

As in other years, trash was a major problem in school. It took a staff of dedicated and hard-working custodians to keep the trash to a bare minimum. "I'm a litterbug, I admit it," said junior Steve Wall, "But everytime I come back to school the next day, all my debris is cleaned up."

Aside from keeping the hallways spotless, the custodians had to maintain the lockers by fixing broken locks and opening jammed doors. "On my first day of school my locker wouldn't open, but just one day after I reported it, a janitor came around and fixed it," said sophomore Tim Dugan. In addition, the custodians had to clean the cafeteria. Their jobs consisted of setting up and putting away all chairs and tables in the cafeteria, as well as taking care of all the garbage left by four lunch shifts of hungry students. They had to be everywhere at once.

The cafeteria personnel also included the kitchen help who cooked all the food and had to keep the lunch lines moving swiftly. "I like the lunch ladies. They're always so perky and a real refreshment from having a stuffy old teacher yelling at you all day long," quoted Jon Bolt. Between keeping the cafeteria and the hallways in order, the school custodians and the cafeteria helpers did an extremely good job keeping up morale this year.

Cafeteria Staff Martha Anderson, Joan Baldwin, Lucy Barbuschak, Jean DeBardi, Margaret Casey, Joan Corbean, Doris Dawson, Ivy Ellis, Rita Faudale, Matthew Fleck, Maggie Gregory, Nancy Hosaflook, Sandra Jacinto, Mary Keninitz, Rose Kirwim, Patricia Lindahl, Mae Martin, Bernadine Maxwell, Frances

Myers, Ameneh Milanizaden, Doris Miller, Anne Morgan, Joe Ann Rice, Mary Spain, Bice Stebner, Myrna Suratt, Nancy Thomas, Ruth Wentworth.

Day Shift Howard Bailey, Doreha Barbour, Robert Bell, Ruth Henry, OK Kim, Johnny Moore, Alvarez Nestor, Mattie Robinson, Catherine Yates. Evening Shift Ray Arrington, Daniel Benson, Arlene Bouffard, Kenneth Carter, Marina Gonzalez, Nancy Johnson, Sanh Le, Rosa Narvaez, Mike Nichols, Alvoid Pearson, Russell Robinson, Sang Song, Kwang Stewart, Elizabeth Sutton, Lucy Vines, James Wilson, Lo Wiredu, Boswell Yates. Night Shift Isabelle Allred, Jimmy Carter, Eui Cho, George Nyols, Barbara Hamilton, Mary Jones, Phuoc Thai.

Little things mean a lot . . .

PEOPLE

Faces ... In a school of over 4500 people, a student at Lake Braddock saw new faces every day. When the bell rang and the halls overflowed with thousands of students, it was too easy for the faces to blend and become one mass of people. It must be remembered that each person was a unique individual. These individuals filled the stands at football and basketball games, made up the cast and audience of Fall Follies skits, crowded into the cafeteria for Homecoming and other dances, and most importantly made up the intermediate, freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

Just as each person was unique, so was each class. The intermediates were optimistic and eager to get involved in the school that was relatively new to them. They were energetic and alive. The freshmen started the year off with a bang by winning the float competition at Homecoming. They became more at ease with themselves and each other. This showed through their new ways of dressing and exciting personalities. The sophomores overwhelmed the rest of the school having almost one thousand in the class. The junior class had a lot of spirit and kept it throughout the year. Knowing they had only one more year to graduation, the juniors worked hard and enjoyed one of their last years at Lake Braddock. The seniors had a special year. They were extremely spirited and close. Some lasting friendships were formed and many will look back on their senior year as one of the best.

Priority painting

It was June 7, 1985, one day after the class of '85 graduated, when approximately 50 spirited and enthusiastic seniors showed up with paint brushes in hand and a tremendous will to carry on the tradition of painting the press box.

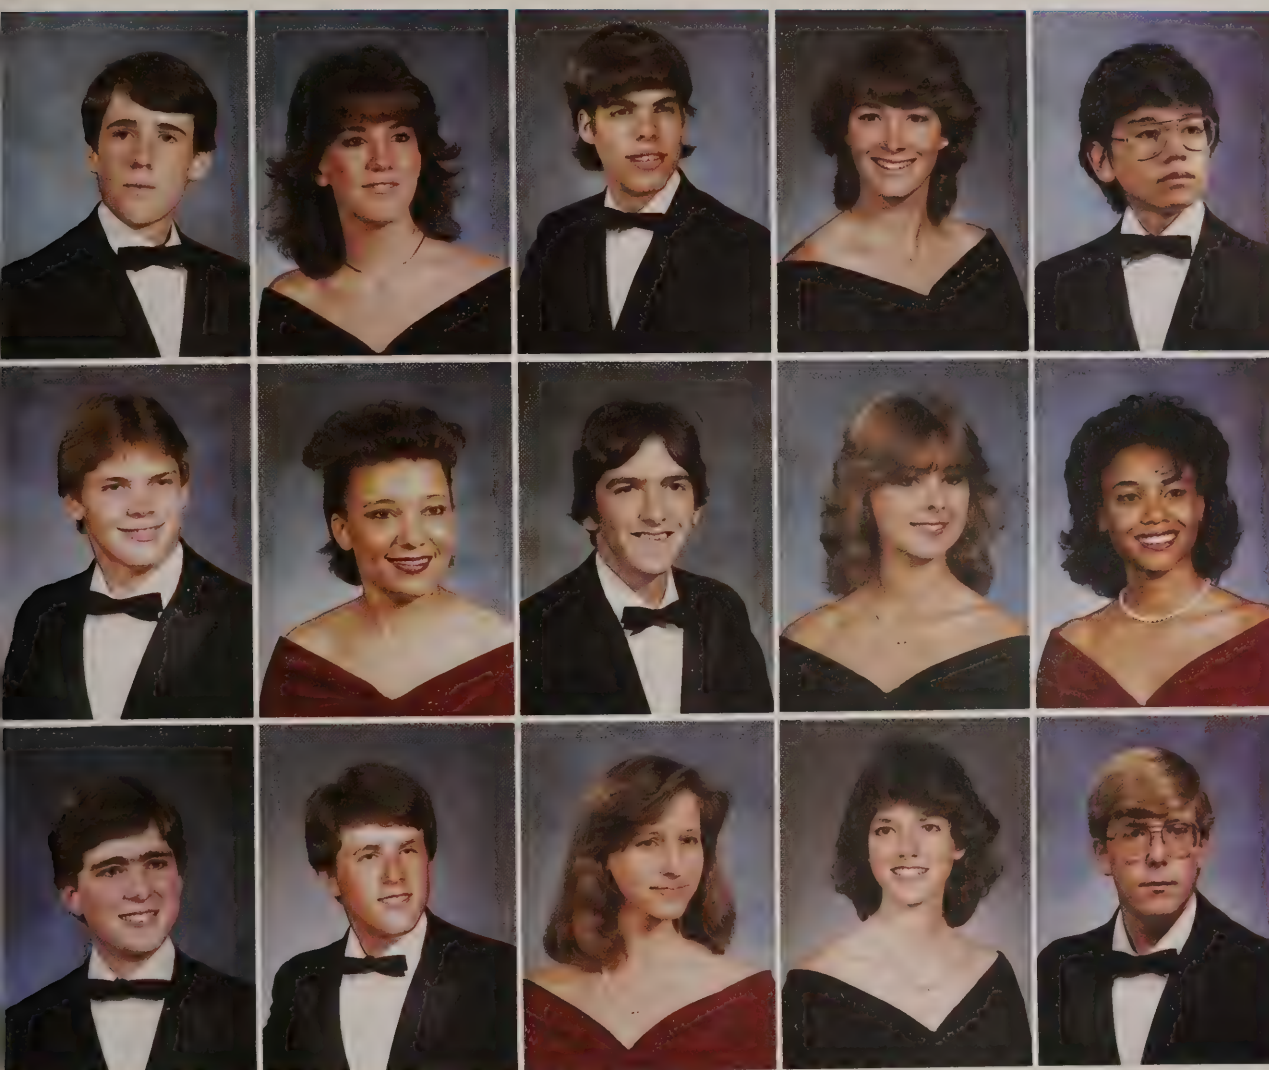

"We need more white!," "How did they get up there?," and "What color goes here?" were concerns that could be heard throughout the day as the senior class transformed the press box to a large 3-D

'86 with purple and gold letters that accented the white background.

"It took nearly three full days to complete, but it was well worth the wait," commented senior Beth Nolen.

After a summer of wear and aggressiveness by former students, the press box once again needed painting as did the home football bleachers. So the class of '86 once again conjured up their spirit and set out to paint what was needed. To add to the excitement, many seniors found that painting each other was as much fun as painting the press box and bleachers, if not more so.

Showing their class and school spirit, the seniors artistically inscribe their '86 on the pressbox.

Seniors in the spotlight

At last! After years of being forbidden by upperclassmen to sit on the senior stage, the class of '86 won the privilege. Walking up a few steps and taking a seat at a covered table gave a senior a sense of pride and accomplishment. Whether they were eating lunch, cramming for tests, or just enjoying the company of other senior friends, each person felt privileged as well as deserving of their own senior space.

The stage was an exciting place to be. In the center of the cafeteria, seniors get the chance to get some recognition. They could sing "Happy Birthday" to friends or make announcements on the microphone provided on the stage. S.G.A. and the class council also gave the word to seniors by hanging signs near the stage. A calendar of class events was posted in addition to a sign warning, "You are what you leave on your table," encouraging everyone to clean up after lunch.

Chris Taylor commented, "The senior stage is great! It is a special privilege just for seniors and it gives us the chance to show everyone we made it."

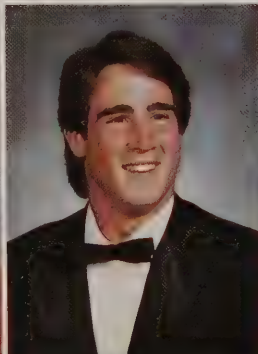

Enjoying their lunch on the stage are privileged seniors Craig Alden, John Brennan, Mark Blake, Evan Clark, and James Mikell.

Dressing up for the main event

On Thursday, October 10, the annual senior class meeting was held. The events of the meeting included voting for the Homecoming Queen, collecting the superlative forms, taking the class picture, and ordering caps and gowns.

Forms were passed out by members of S.G.A. to order caps and gowns. Also distributed were special paper rulers to measure the size of the caps that would carry the tassel which would transform the senior into a Lake Braddock graduate. This marked the start of the preparation for graduation. Seniors grew more and more excited as they realized the anticipated day was in the near future.

Adrienne Harding stated, "It was exciting to order the caps and gowns because we are all looking forward to graduating."

"There's a lot of preparation for graduation and to finally wear the caps and gowns will be the end of our high school career," commented Anne Roche.

At the class meeting senior Steve Suter measures his head before ordering his cap and gown as Mike Saale looks on.

Seniors apply themselves

As graduation neared for the class of 1986, many seniors were pressured to make decisions about college and applications. What college to attend, the size of the college and how far away from home were just a few things they were faced with.

At the beginning of October, counselors talked to all senior English classes, handing out information about colleges, applications, and SAT exams.

Many college applications required that students write essays about themselves or their interests. Planning an essay carefully, completing the application neatly and adding recommendations if required were considered to be three of the most important necessities in filling out the application. The most crucial factor was meeting the deadline for admissions, whether it be early decision, early action, regular or rolling.

The whole procedure was quite tedious, but seniors knew personal applications were the first impression a college got of them. Tracy Hughes commented, "Even though the process of filling out applications is time consuming and tedious, I'm having a lot of fun doing it. College applications are adding some excitement to my senior year, making me feel important knowing that the seniors get to take part in something none of the other classes do. It's great!"

Concentrating to provide accurate information, Lisa Walker completes a preliminary college application.

Junior Miss not missed!

The 1985 Junior Miss Pageant was held in October. Qualified candidates included upcoming seniors who competed for the coveted "Junior Miss" title and for scholarship money. Girls from each area school were invited to try out for the approximate 25 slots. Lake Braddock participants included Kristen McCracken, Stacey Harris, Cherie Deronja, Karen Tarlano, and Karla Spagnola.

Candidates for Junior Miss were judged on their written applications and personal interviews. Two performance nights were held at Fairfax High School. The 20 participants demonstrated talent, physical fitness, poise, and beauty. Karla Spagnola was selected as first runner up.

The girls had the support of friends and peers in the audience. Jennifer Brandt said, "I thought it was great that the girls had a chance not only to compete, but to make friends with girls from other schools."

Participant Karen Tarlano explained, "I really had a great time meeting so many cool girls from other schools. It wasn't like we were competing against each other, but rather pulling to see each other succeed. I recommend to other girls to try out for Junior Miss. It was a great experience that I will always remember."

Before the pageant begins, Junior Miss contestants Kristen McCracken, Stacey Harris, Karla Spagnola, Karen Tarlano, and Cherie DeRonja gather to wish each other good luck.

First prize homecoming

"It was our last Homecoming week and being remembered in the future was important to the senior class. It's hard to believe that next year we'll be the ones coming home," commented senior Dana Hammersla.

The Homecoming festivities of 1985 came into full swing two weeks early this year, but despite the early arrival, the senior class played a tremendous role in making the week a memorable one. The class of '86 was well prepared to compete for the spirit banner.

The first point scoring event in the action packed week was Beautification. The senior class started with a bang and took first place for outstanding attendance. The next event was Fall Follies in which the class of 1986 captured first place for a second consecutive year. The senior class also walked away winners after submitting their original Spartan dummy.

Winning all the events so far, the seniors were psyched and continued their sweep at the pep assembly.

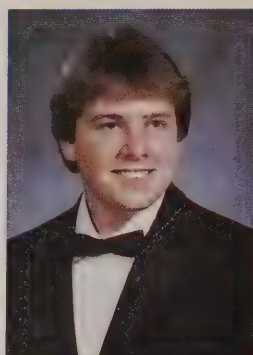

At the game, the seniors sighed with relief when their unstable graduates managed to stay in one piece during the float procession.

At the end of the week packed with fun and school spirit, the senior class of 1986 proudly accepted the spirit banner, naming them the most spirited class. Senior Lisa Walker stated, "I've known all along that the class of '86 was the most spirited class, but having the spirit banner in our possession just made it official."

Thrills, chills, and adventure

On Friday May 10, 1985, the staff of Kings Dominion closed their doors to the public in preparation for the annual "Grad Nite." On this day, the juniors and seniors from the Washington D.C. and Richmond metropolitan areas gathered at Kings Dominion for an evening packed full of thrilling rides, junk food, and good music.

From 6:00 P.M. until midnight, the students soaked themselves on the White Water Canyon, dried themselves off on the speeding Grizzly and enjoyed the tunes from John Cafferty and the Beaver Brown Band.

Katie Gaffney, a senior who attended the night at Kings Dominion commented, "Grad Nite at Kings Dominion was a chance for the members of the class of 1986 to come together and enjoy themselves without the cliques and pressures of school."

As the evening drew to a close, the frazzled juniors and seniors dragged themselves to the busses with many fond memories of their "Grad Nite" adventure at Kings Dominion.

Snacking after hours

The Senior Snack Bar opened everyday after school at 2:30 p.m. in the doorway of the cafeteria. During the year, the seniors raised more than $10,000 which helped the class to meet their objective. The goal was to make as much money as possible for the class to use toward prom and graduation. Rick Smartt, class historian, commented, "The class has been very supportive, both buying and working in the snack bar. One goal this year was to make sure no food was given out free. Improvements this year included new items such as, Cherry Coke, Minute Maid, Orange Soda, Classic Coke and potato chips."

Steve Lesh and Christine Kolata were two of the many seniors who contributed much of their time to running the snack bar. Christine Kolata explained, "The snack bar is the most important fund raiser the senior class has. It also benefits the student body. The snack bar also helps to fight the after school munchies. — Snickers anyone?"

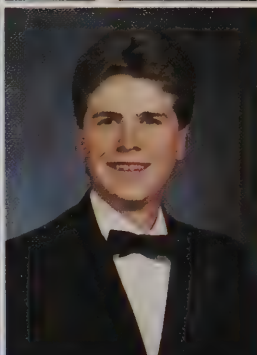

To raise money for the prom, Christine Kolata spends the afternoon working in the Senior Snack Bar.

Committing to one's country

Many of the young men in the senior class celebrated their eighteenth birthdays.

Along with it came the responsibility of registering for the draft at the post office.

Lake Braddock seniors were asked "How do you feel about registering for the draft?" Here are some responses:

Art Johnson: "I'll register just to protect the country."

Scott Ballantyne: "It's unfair, but I guess I'll have to do it because it's the law."

At the post office, Shawn Link's draft registration form receives the official stamp from Mr. Gabe Ross.

Mark McWhinney: "I'll do it, because it's part of becoming an adult, and a part to live in this free country of ours."

Jeff Woodbury: "Sometimes you just gotta' say, 'Hey what the heck!' So I guess I'll register, so I don't get put in jail and be marked for life."

Mark DeFrees: "I'll register because it's the law and they need people to fight for this country. But I say, if I can go fight in a war, I should be able to come home and..."

Tim Kane: "I believe in this country and its system and to preserve it I would die for it — I am for the draft. Someone has to fight."

See John work

John Doe was finally a senior! In addition to all the hard work and pressure put on him by school, he decided to take on a job. (He was beginning to realize the importance of money in his life.) John had plenty of things in mind to spend money on. He wanted a collar for Spot, new clothes, car, a date with Jane, and a college education.

Sometimes, John didn't organize his time well and fell behind in school. However, compromises could be made. Lynn Preston said, "I only work on weekends and concentrate on school during the week."

John seriously considered this idea.

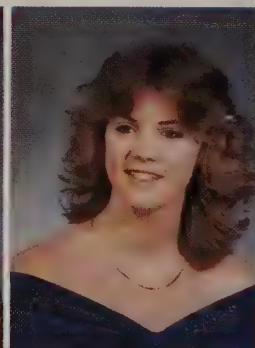

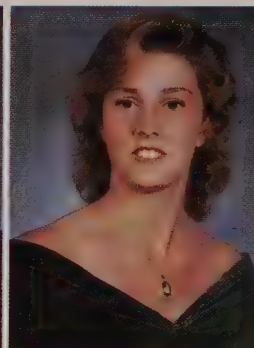

When John thought of work, dollar signs lit up in his eyes. Making money may have been the best part of having a job for John, but as Reneé Wheeler put it, "When you work, you get to meet a lot of people, make new friends, and have fun, too!"

John also considered Bill Cook's idea when he said, "I want to work to save up money for prom."

Spirit sparkers

As the senior class of 1986 came back to school from a great summer of fun, the class officers, Maria Cademartori, president; Laura Bishop, vice president; Billy Tresky, secretary; Jay DuHadway, treasurer; Kathy Moore, SGA representative; and Ricky Smartt, historian, had already begun planning the events and activities for the year ahead.

A free graduation and a low cost prom were top priority goals set by the class officers as their last year at Lake Braddock began. The Senior snack bar and the three soc-hops sponsored by the class of '86 provided the means to achieve these goals.

The officers kept the class busy and spirited throughout the year with activities such as the Homecoming float, the Fall Follies skit, and the Fall Festival. Events that were greatly anticipated included a spectacular prom and a memorable graduation. Class of '86 president, Maria Cademartori, summed up the year, "Our class couldn't have had better people in it. Each person added significantly and in return the class of '86 became the most unified class that I have seen go through Lake Braddock."

Working hard to make their senior year a success are the senior class officers Billy Tresky, Jay DuHadway, Maria Cademartori, Rick Smartt, Kathy Moore, and Laura Bishop.

Seniors voice opinions

Baliles for governor! Durrette for governor! Who would it be? Many seniors taking US/VA government were involved in the race between Wyatt Durrette and Jerry Balilles.

Some classes had the choice of making a notebook of newspaper articles or working for a candidate. Many students chose to work volunteer hours. That was the fun part. People from different schools would report to the headquarters of a candidate to participate in various activities. Sometimes seniors would work at a phone bank. Here, they would sit themselves down with a list of phone numbers and proceed to take polls, ask questions, or inform others about upcoming activities. Other times a group would get together to do a Burma Shave. This meant standing on roadsides or even the Key Bridge to hold signs for a candidate to attract attention.

Government students also made signs, dropped off literature at houses, took surveys, and attended rallies for credit. It was a fun way of learning by being involved.

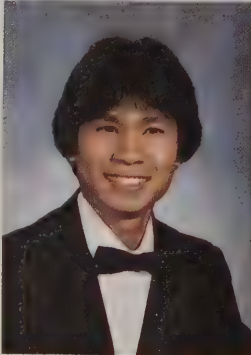

Campaigning on the Key Bridge for the Republican Party are Kenny Morrisette and Variny Yim.

Counting down to the sun

It was a frosty winter evening as a group of seniors huddled around a fire since the snow and icy roads had cancelled their Friday night plans. As they sat sipping hot cocoa, the conversation wandered to such topics as boardwalks, swimming, sunbathing, and seafood. But this was not an unusual topic for seniors, even in the dead of winter. Beach week had become a senior tradition at Lake Braddock.

Anxiously awaiting this trip to Ocean City, seniors spent a large part of their year making arrangements for the fun-filled week. Tracey Rush decided where she and her friends would stay and exclaimed, "I've been waiting for beach week since seventh grade! It is going to be great!" Anne Roche added, "I'm already counting down the hours, I can't wait for sand, sun, and surf!"

Getting acquainted with the atmosphere of Ocean City Boardwalk are Anne Cirillo, Kim Caruthers, and Lizz Bolden.

Grin and wear it

The senior year at Lake Braddock was packed full of traditions that have been handed down over the years. Some of these include manning the snack bar, occupying the Senior Stage, painting the press box, producing a varsity show, and the ongoing tradition of purchasing senior t-shirts.

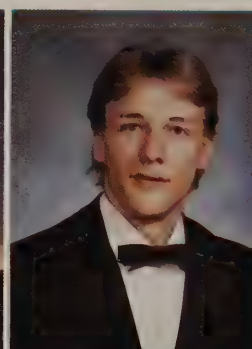

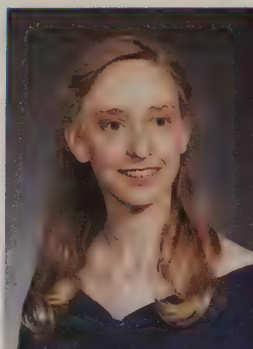

Seniors united as a class and ordered t-shirts to symbolize their senior status. However, unlike any other senior class in the history of Lake Braddock, the class of 1986 ordered their shirts in May of their junior year to ensure their arrival by the first day of school.

Designed by class members Chris Andrews and Lynn Calvert, the shirts featured an 86 printed in gold with the word "seniors" written diagonally in the color purple. Senior Dana Massey commented, "I think it was great that we had our senior t-shirts early in the year. It really demonstrated that the class of '86 had senior spirit and a lot of class unity."

Proudly displaying their senior t-shirts, Karin Olsen and Margie Leahy study for a quiz before school.

Exceeding the limits

Summertime — usually a time of travel, work, and play. Yet, for those seniors who were selected for Boys' and Girls' State, it was also a summer of participation.

From the sixty nominees, counselors chose four boys, four girls, and an alternate for each. GPA, extra-curricular activities, and an essay the students wrote on Lake Braddock and school spirit enabled counselors to choose ten qualified students. The male participants were Chris Arcona, Scott Crawford, David Foglesong, Albert Kim, and alternate Tim May. Melissa Burroughs, Lynn Calvert, Pam Gupta, Christine Robertson, and alternate Lisa Sullivan were the female participants.

The 900 male participants attended Lynchburg College. The girls were among the 625 girls who attended Girls' State at Longwood College. For one week, the participants learned about Virginia government by being assigned to "cities" and becoming "residents." In this manner, they learned through problem solving. Lynn Calvert enthusiastically said, "The high points of the week were the speeches from Governor Robb and Gerald Baliles. I really benefited from this program. I'm glad I was able to participate!"

Representing the class of '86 at Boys' and Girls' State are Pamila Gupta, Scott Crawford, Melissa Burroughs, Dave Foglesong, and Lynn Calvert.

Represented by the best

Governor's School participants, Duane Barber, George Lucier, and Karla Spagnola were chosen from over a hundred applicants. Their acceptance was based on their top-notch quality in grades, school, community activities, PSAT scores, and written competition.

Governor's School lasted for four weeks in June and July. Karla Spagnola and George Lucier took courses in philosophy and current events at Virginia Tech. Duane Barber went to Mary Baldwin College and took courses in history, law, and psychology. In addition to the regular classes, they took field trips to the Catskills and to a German Festival.

Duane Barber, Aaron Crippen, and Liz Sawtelle were selected to represent Lake Braddock as National Merit semi-finalists. They were among the 15,000 semifinalists honored throughout the country based on their outstanding PSAT scores.

Liz Sawtelle commented, "It felt great to be a National Merit semifinalist!"

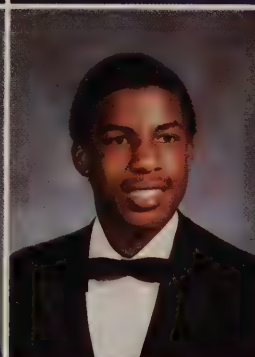

Karla Spagnola, Liz Sawtelle, Duane Barber, and George Lucier were all honored for their outstanding academic achievements.

In closing . . .

As graduation approached, the members of the Class of 1986 looked back at their high school years and the fond memories that they would always cherish. Many things had happened since their first days as seventh grade Bruins running among upperclassmen to get to their PE classes. Their years at Lake Braddock had provided them with long lasting friendships, late night cramming sessions, class rings, first romances, jobs, football games, dances, Homecoming weeks, driver's licenses, and many other memorable events and moments.

The Class of 1986 was very proud of their achievements. They had definitely left their mark on Lake Braddock. They captured the Spirit Banner two years in a row and set an example for the rest of the school that said class unity, school pride, and hard work do pay off.

The time had come for the members of the class of 1986 to look ahead. College and careers were now in the near future. Lake Braddock had prepared the Class of 1986 for the years to come.

The last two months of high school were extremely exciting for the seniors. An elegant Prom at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington D.C., including a night out on the town, a tux, the gown of her dreams, and Dad's car marked the evening the Class of 1986 had been waiting for for years.

Graduation procedures began with the baccalaureate at Holy Cross Catholic Church. Anticipation mounted and the graduation ceremony finally began. Each senior proudly accepted his diploma, turned his tassel and was transformed to a Lake Braddock Graduate.

Marc de Bearn: Lake Brad-dock, 4 yrs. to remember, many people not to forget: Lisa, Robby, Yvette, John, Tim, Victor, Amy, Tricia, Paul, Sheri and most of all Steve Suter, a friend who has helped me out too many times to remember them all. Well, off to college, time to meet new people, I hope I'm ready. Good Luck, my friends.

Grant Beaver: Celebrate, for we have progressed, from little mutants to great minds ready to change the world. Remember, we were not here nor there but in between. To Rolf Hawkins I leave my intellectual mind. To Winston Segner I leave all my creative explosions and terrorist activities. To Kevin Bonanno I leave a snake to accompany him on his fishing trips. To Brian Bradley I leave foreign foods of many culinary dishes. To Tim Cook I leave good weather in Chimcotango. To the best of my friends I leave my memories to flourish in the minds of future creators. Have fun, live long and prosper.

Jennifer Bednarsky: Friends like you are few and far between. Thanks for everything T.O., S.W., R.W., H.L., A.H., H.C., and all the rest! We finally made it! Hey R.W. and H.L., don't forget Putt Putt, Indian Rituals, High's, Wham! Joey baby, and all the other crazy times we've had. "Hurt me." Tee, thanks for the special friendship and memories. You're the best! We're such party finders. Waste much gas! S.S. you are a nut! Thanks Mom and Dad and all you guys. ILY! '86 Forever!

Jennifer Beha: Thanks to my loving parents for their continued support through these more than difficult years; and to my two sisters Margie and Lar, Whom without, I couldn't have made it this far. The 3 B's live forever! How 'bout those BOOKS we read? Je t'aime Steve — Toujours!

Steve Benger: I would like to say Thank-you to the teachers that helped me Graduate this year.

David Bentley: Thank-you Moni and Meam I wouldn't have made it without you guys. Karen and Irnia I didn't forget about you thanks. Thanks Frank, Darrell, Wyn, John, Jack, Stretch, Dany, Mike, "the girls" — L.S., D.K., K.L., M.B., P.G., B.F., the DB8 team — B.G., K., S.H., L.T., etc.; Dena, and especially George and Aaron for making it memorable. Thanks also to Mrs. D who has taught me a little more than just how to DB8. Good Luck!

John Brennan: Well, my career as a high school student is over. So long L.B. Luv ya Sandy, you're the best! Take it easy Ken, Spager, Jeff, Den, the Blakes, and Furry little Ewok. It's been real.

Mark Brown: We made it through the title page and the introduction, now it's time to turn to chapter one and see what this story is all about. Hold on to your dreams while holding on to reality and we'll be just fine. Thanks Mom and Dad.

Matt Brown: To the future we look ahead to the past we remember. It's been a good one. Thanks B.H., M.K., and M.E., and others, you made it interesting. Dad and Mom, you made it count, thanks. B.H., Fred will never die. M.K. don't forget about STEELY DAN. M.E. see you at the Improv. Think about it.

Amy Bryce: Has it really been 6 years? All my old buds have already gone — thanks W.L., M.G., K.C., N.N., and D.T. Am I still the last leg? Hey, Footb bro's, I love you!! Cathron, you're the last leg. It's been a long time, bud. Remember all our laughs, especially "famous" Mike! Wonkles forever — AAAAAAA! Meesh, Debarge and Jeffrey still rule! J.B., who's gonna walk me to school next year? Paula, let's go bowling. Lori baby, what guys? You must be kidding! M.A., it only takes a pinch! Mom and Pop, thanks for everything. I love you! "Today is my moment, now is my story, I'll laugh, and I'll cry, and I'll sing." — John Denver.

Jonathan Bunker: Step across the line and into the light. Time is yours to hold but it will always slip away. Thank L.C., M.S., L.S., you were all good friends. P.D. I did catch you. D.W. thanks for the light Krelmaki, good luck C.W. we made 4 years together thanks for being there and don't slam my door. My prayers are with you all.

Mark Greentree: "Nobody ever told me I found out for myself, ya gotta believe in foolish miracles. It's not how you play the game, it's how you win or lose, you can choose, don't confuse, win or lose, It's up to you. "Ozzy." Got a feeling Inside, can't explain, it's a certain kind, can't explain, I'm feeling good now yeah, but I can't explain. The Who, U2 RULES, "The Unforgettable Fire" Thanks for the memories. Thanks Mom and Dad.

Trevor Gregg: "@@#!" Good luck J.A.M., G.S., and the rest of the class of '87.

Dan Gregorio: "... I can feel it coming in the air at night... Oh Lord... and I've been waiting for this moment for all my life... Oh Lord... Oh Lord... PHIL COL-LINS. There comes a time to move on. I think it has come upon us. Thanks L.B., especially "class of '86."

Carey Griffin: Dip and Chunky, we finally made it, and LB is still standing. Dip, how is the swimming this time of the year, and how is your hand feeling. Have you drank any pizza lately? Hey Chunky how does it feel to dance with bobwire, or do you not remember? Kelly, those cokes were good and all I can say now is I'm "beam" bound, I meant beach bound with my beam.

Skip Griffith: Remember — you can't buy experience on the easy payment plan. 6 years of LB have come and gone. Thanks to everyone who made it special. Bill, you're a cat. Mark M. I'm glad I met you — thanks. Patrick and family, I'll remember you. Kelly and Gert, I love my new neighbors. Brock, I'll take care of the white-out! Thanks Mom and Dad for understanding. Craig, you're a team man. VAN HALEN #1. To my SGA family and teachers, thanks. Keep your feet on the ground and keep reaching for the stars!

John Grimsley: Thanks Mom and Dad I couldn't have done it without you. If college is harder than chemistry I don't know what I'll do! K.J. get a real car. Thanks M.S. and E.E. Physics was a blast! J.M. you're almost there! Bob, quit playing with toys and get a real job! Here today, gone to MAUI. Loving every minute of it!

Richard Groggel: Don't you hate it when you look forward to graduating and then you realize how much you're going to miss everybody? R.C. (both of you) Keep on bikin'. D.H. and L.C., take care of the kiddies in the DRUMLINE. A.K., when will you ever learn? LBMB #1 (thank CAB) Our Gang forever! Mitchell Hanback: Gregg can't wait til your Vega is "restored" won't that be bad. To all the ones who have experienced the Court, what a long strange trip it's been — D.B., P.D., N.J., L.B., D.N., G.C. See you later L.O., D., and S.P. To the one I've loved the longest Lori Butler move back someday soon.

Angie Hancock: Tomorrow is a dream that leads me onward. Tomorrow is a path I've yet to choose. It's a chance I've yet to take, a friend I've yet to make. It's all the talent I've yet to use. Tomorrow is a dream that leads me onward — always just a step ahead of me... It's a joy to know the love I've yet to show, for it's the person I've yet to be. Thanks Mom and Dad and Nell for all your love and support! Ade and Les you'll always be my bestest friends! Good luck Gaily — I love you all!! Summer of '84, those were the best days of my life. Thanks AJ, LL, BT, MP, PD, SW!! And to Jay — I LOVE YOU!! You'll always hold that special place in my heart!! Best of luck '86. Thank you God.

Rich Hanson: "Our future may lie beyond our vision, but it is not completely beyond our control. It is the shaping impulse of America that neither fate nor nature nor the irresistible tide of history, but the work of our own hands, matched to reason and principle that will determine destiny. There is pride in that, even arrogance, but there is also experience and truth. In any event, it is the only way we can live." — Robert F. Kennedy. See ya AR, MP, KK, VP, CUD, JF, PC, JR, AK, DS, GK, RH, and thanks folks! You're the greatest. Congratulations to all the class of 1986.

Gopal Kowdley: The drying up of a single tear has more of honest fame than shedding seas of gore. Any fool can make a rule. I used to be someone, big executive. Then one day someone yelled "Hey, he's just a big cockroach!" G.T.A.P.B.S. Thanks mom, dad, friends (Cud, Stretch, Sta. Kent (Ku.), Mark. A ...). Wealth awaits me.

Ken Kraus: Hey '86 — Dudes we made it! Yea, Buddy. "What's goin' on this weekend?" Dip-Lalalala. "Thanks Mr. Jenkins." Beam (1/5) — C'mon Holms have a chocolate biscuit. Cruisin mobile-Porsche! C.G. How many tickets? It's casual. Dude you owe me money. Chill out! "Rick, I need more time." — J.B. ooh-oooh new sensations! L.N. It's a message of love! C.G.I.D. Bru Cru and Lou! Later...

Chris Kraus: "Free Bird" — Lynyrd Skynyrd; dedicated to the class of '86. We finally made it! Now the real fun begins... "This is a trip!" — I still feel as though I'm in the twilight zone. Believe me; Mass was never quite like this. I'd like to thank: B.E.; for always being there when I needed to "talk." Without you and Jen, this year wouldn't have been the same. Just think, we have much more to look forward to: Especially S.S.-Beach Week!! J.B. — Never forget our little 'gossip sessions' 5th per., R.M. does not know what he's in for! (ha, ha). To D.M. — hmmm... What can I say?? I hope we can become better acquainted, so to speak. There is a long year ahead of us... To: B.B., A.J., M.K., S.S., L.M., C.S., A., A.J., D., D.S., B., K.K., T.D., and P. — Congratulations, I wish you all the best! — And last, but not least; To my parents — without your love and support I would have never made it this far. — Bob, now it's your turn!! Good Luck next year.

Kim Kress: Hey, Buckwheats, this has been a very interesting year at LBS. Porkey, Micky Dess will never be the same. P.G., I'll never forget all the long talks. Thanks, D.E. "Come and get it." B.L. will never be the same. To R.S. thanks for everything. I'll never forget your smile and the special times we shared. "Forever in my heart." Kelly, to the best friend I'll ever have, thanks for putting up with me. To Mom and Dad, you'll never really lose me. I really do love you both very much!

Kristen Kritzer: Mom and Dad — without you, and your support, this year would have meant nothing. Thank-you. KAREN — We're both going to experience a new beginning. I give you all the love you're going to need for these next few years. Skip — I love you, you're the best friend I could ever have, and you too, KARIN — "HA DOIN'! To Sonya, K.W., M.M., S.S., D.W., K.G., S.M., K.P. Thanks for making my years here so special, it's nice to know with friends like you, all you need to say is "I LOVE YOU" and I do. "It's hard to get old without a cause... youth's like DIAMONDS IN THE SUN, and DIAMONDS ARE FOREVER... Stay forever young..." — LOOK OUT CAPITOL HILL, HERE WE COME!!

Trevor Kurtz: To have is to hold, and to hold is to have. Don't go buying any more rattlers E.L. Now that the peanut gallery is gone have fun with mop-chop M.C. Blonds have more fun. J and J don't do anything I wouldn't do, but if you do name it after me. Keep the faith. Wie bust du? No more lockers, no more scrubs. "Thanks Mom, Dad, the Zimbobwean relief agent, Santa Claus, and all the ships at sea. Good-bye everybody.

Jennifer King: Thanks to all my friends and teachers for helping me out. Love to O.H., J.M., K.S., O.P.S., Kerry, Liz, C.H., A.C. and everyone else. I love you Mom and Dad. I hope you hear me. I did this all just for you! Thanks J.R., for being there when I needed you! Vanessa, sister/Mom, what can I say but thank you and I love you! I'd be no where if it weren't for you! Get married, would you please?!!

David LaBounty: Thanks God for always being there when I needed you (which was all the time.) I couldn't have done it without you. Through the years, I have come to realize that people who don't believe in prayer in the schools never took one of Rumlik's Bio. tests. Yes Mom and Pop I did have fun. To all my friends, I am not going to mention you in this quote. To my loving sisters, all you get from me is this: "Remember no matter where you go, there you are." BB. Pretty deep huh?! This is David LaBounty, filling in for Roger Mudd. Thank-you and Goodnight.

Noel Lafontaine: '86, we made it! It's been a long and hard climb, but we made it to the top. It's been unreal, and the memories are very special. To all my buddies... thanks for the fun times and memories we've shared. Rayber, hey now kiddo! You are a great friend. I luv you! JR, "Chemistry is definitely RM+CC's." JC, see you in another life. Kath and Liz you are indescribable — thanks for everything. P and B and E forever. Dax, thanks for being there and I love you 24 graips. Meddy + Gator... I made it. Robbie Flovie loves you. Chrissy, "The fat man definitely rocks." SENIORS we are OC bound — get wet and party it up.

Robert Lamoureux: The end is near as you can see and all I have to say is "Thank God for D's" BP is such the place but all you guys are lost in space. Neal get a car, Ben get a job, Pete — well I leave that one alone. Take it easy AR, NR, KH, RM, DS, SE, CF, EP, DN, JB, Rat. Well LB forward my grades to Fort Lauderdale Beach. AMF'S

Steve Lansbury: "Look like the innocent flower but be the serpent under it." BS, what's up Jack! "What a long strange trip it's been." Grateful Dead. Sorry, sometimes these things just happen.

Marcy Larriva: We're almost out of here, we're finally escaping; good luck to Cross Country. Hope you have a great season and always keep running. Remember Tanya, Michele and Merlina the great times and out of this world concerts. Thanks for being there all the time Mom and Dad.

David Latour: Lake Braddock — We'll see ya! Welp Matt W it's been great, but our time has just begun. Mindy, You'll always be in my heart. OC, here we come! Hey Frigault, tag me my beer! Maria, you're a sweetheart. Kim, You're a SM! LB baseball, there's nothing better! Thanks for the times everyone. Couldn't have done it without ya Mom and Dad. I can't believe it's all gone by so fast. But now it's our time. Our time to graduate.

Shelly Lawless: Thanks to all my friends for the greatest four years of my life!! SS, LP, and NH. Love you guys! Good luck.

Kathy Layton: Graduation: "It calls to mind long and sad goodbyes." — George Michael. Thanks BC, GC, DC, AS, RR, RR, CD, BF, JW, SL, MC for all the good times. Mom, Dad, Scott, and Jennifer — I love you all very much. Brian: Everyone's perfect love comes around only once, I'm glad mine was you. Thanks for making my senior year the best and most of all for your faith and love. I love you now and forever.

Margarita Leahy: First of all I'd like to thank my parents for supporting me through everything I did. Also for making me strive forward to make myself better. I'd like to say good luck to Maria C., Christine K., Craig, Katie, and Sheila. I'd like to thank everyone who made this year a special one. Memories are happiness, when I think of all of you.

Scott Lechevet: To love one Maiden only, cleave to her, and worship her by years of golden deeds. Dedicated to Mary Siatis. "Tennyson"

Matt Ledman: Thanks to all who helped me survive. Now comes the real challenge. Mom, Dad, Sis, I love you. Band it was fun!! Good luck to all and remember — Heavy Metal Rules.

Kang Lee: Beyond the horizon we sail. Let's hope the world IS round, so we won't fall off the edge. (who said that?)

Kyung Lee: Life's good except when you're treated poorly. Congrats Barrel. Thanks for the "wisdom" Sup. Hey baby, what's shakin'! Ack! AC, some of it's been fun. Thanks for the dance JS. Hi Dr. George! Hey Tm. DZ watch out for tackles. Lisa you're truly the best. What'll I do without you in college. Don't get fat, except for where it counts! And to the rest of the gang PG, MB, DK, KR, WE, U2, and Dr. Richard, I'll miss you all. Good Luck!!

Jan Lee: Scum 5 live — Remember Fred? Let's get some donuts. Cute towel Karen! B.F.A. Amy and Ryan. I.M.Y. JC. Thanks Mom and Dad. Go Bananas!!

Yong Lee: Thanks to all who were there when I needed them. RH and PC good luck. Hey Jay, your bug movin' yet? Paint job doesn't do any good unless it moves. Thanks Mom and Dad for the push up the bill, it's time to coast.

Brenda Leerar: It's been truly awesome. Always rage LBMB-drum line, you're awesome and I love you! Karen, my mallet bud-dueling marimbas forever. Yeah I think we could get into a little Latin jam! Yo Bowie (yeah you Donna) it's Zowie — let's flap. Ellen, my little bucaroo slow down you're moving too fast, just listen to Roy. "Honest El, I didn't even TRY the bonus." KRISTEEN — you're a true Buck, always have been, always will be — it's a way of life. VAAATH? Kathode, master of scuping, fellow cruiser (Kathy Burke from Burke-original) I need a novel for you dudes, but basically, I love your guts, girl. The days of Bach and Ace have been great. Thanks most of all to my Mom and Dad — you're the best and I love you.

John Lerch: I'd like to thank all my friends for making me feel welcome during my two years at Lake Braddock.

Steve Lesh: Life's a Beach. A bish. Beach Week '86!! RH, KB, GB, and WS, you're all too weird for me. Stay cool and don't get into any trouble. EC, these high school years have been great. We've been through good times and bad times, but it's been great. It's been for bigger and better things. LB, I couldn't have made it through the years without you. Hi Mom.

Mike Lewis: Oh ho ho you want more libs? Yeah bud I gotta lot band-aids. What? Ya know green like his teeth. Oh... Adrenalin starts to flow — you're thrashing all around acting like a maniac-WHIPLASH! Really? Sounds painful. Well Brothers — seniors finally. The triumvirate will be reunited. May Dio bless us and Cronos eat our class sponsor! MUYFA to SS, TJ, ES, RJC, BA, TC, JD, DH, TB, JT-Metallico and Maiden forever. Thanks Mom and Dad for everything. Party hard, '86, and thrash on!

Patrick Lewis: Don't walk in front of me, I may not follow; Don't walk behind me, I may not lead; walk beside me and just be my friend. Thanks to everyone who walked beside me! BQ — don't stop believing, dreams do come true. Thanks for being there Carri, I'll always love you. Thanks Billy, Scott, Reeses, JT, RW, TW, BS, AS, JP, and especially Mom and Dad, I love you! Scott, we've finally graduated.

Sara Liftman: Here's to all of my past memories, present friends and future dreams. To BP, GN, MC, and LM — thanks for listening to me throughout the years. To the guy who will remain in my dreams forever, thank you Dirk for all of the great memories. You taught me a lot and made me grow up. (I love you) To GN, G-town was great! The Tombs won't forget us. To my French lover Jean Michel... let me always be your American dream. You made France chovette. To Mom, Dad, and Stephen — how can one family put up with so much? Thanks! Goodbye forever LB... It's been a LONG 6 years! Au revoir mes amis.

Peter Lind: I love Phylis; MB doesn't believe me, but it'll last forever. Thanx to Marshall; DDD saves lives! Sheesh! Sill kickin' in the beams! If you're not a slug you're hurtin' for certain. Is Mr. Bailey really the joke of the day? Hi CM, MM, JS, RA. Too bad SB can't see all of this. MC is the best friend! I love KMO.

Jenny Lindenauer: "Wow that was tough." Thank you Mom and Dad, I love you both. Mrs. W you're terrific. Hey CD how many bowls of cereal, and now the show must go on.

Shawn Link: It's been 4 long years, hard and easy, but we've finally made it. EC, HL, JP, MH, SG, LP, SL, KW, AR, AH, and everyone else take it easy and keep in touch. This one is gonna shake the world. Remember KO '85 and the wild drives. Good-bye Lake Braddock. Hello college life. Which way is up, I still don't know.

Michelle Linscott: Hey dudes, It's been a great 5 years here at LB. This year was the best. Diane, Alison, good luck to you always — Kacia, you will always be my FPLA. Mom and Dad I love you, thanks for everything. Hey little sis, have fun. Hey all my Thespian friends, It's been great. Remember "we are the champions." Go Bruins.

Geoff Long: I'm finally in my last year. I have made mistakes but I've never made the mistake of claiming that I've made one. — James Bennett. Thanks Mom and Dad and everyone — KS, JT, VP, MR, LC, PC, and MT. Remember: "If you want to hide your face, walk naked." — Stanislaw Lee. "Why?"

Kortney Lowe: Later daze people, I'll be thinking about ya while I'm in the warm sun while you all are freezing (ya Bums). Party Hardy and remember metal rules the land, I wanna thank my friends for being my friends (I'll pay ya later). Me wuz here 85-86 I'm out!!

Katherine Lu: Remember the past for it is gone; Look to the future, for it is coming; Live for the present for it is here. Thanks to all my friends for the good times and memories.

George Lucier: More than at any other point in history, mankind faces crossroads. One path leads to utter despair and hopelessness, the other to total extinction. Let us pray we have the wisdom to choose correctly.

Tammy Lutz: Good luck to everyone at LB and don't give up. Nicole, we've had some pretty radical times together. Thanks for always being there and for being a terrific friend. Please keep in touch and don't ever lose your wild personality. To Joe, Greg A, Greg K, Larry N, Larry L, Mark, Mike L, Scott, Tina, Steve, Karl and Keith, good luck in your futures, stay sweet and keep out of trouble. To my favorite person, Mike, I love you.

Donna Madison: "We will remember these years together, the times we've spent together, and the many memories we've shared." To mom, dad, and David — I love you! Thanks for all your love and support. To the gang (J.S., V.M., T.R., J.D., L.S., T.J., K.R., P.R., K.G., D.L., D.T., D.J., L.R., S.W.) and to all of my other terrific friends. I'll miss you and will never forget those wild and crazy times. Good luck to all of you as we go our separate ways. Kevin especially for you. "I'm crazy for you, never surrender."

Yocencia Magnotta: Time is a playful kitten, she creeps up on you and drinks the day like a bowl of milk. It has been a great four years!!

Pamela Mahoney: You only live once but if you do it right, once is enough! It was what I made it... Lots of hard work and tears, but even more joy. What will LBSS do without us! "86" Matt, Mark, John, Ted, Keith, Jim, Steve, Doug, Dave W., and Craig! I may not be the prettiest girl in the world, but hey, What do looks matter if you've got a wonderful personality? Terri, Anne, Kristin, Laura, Heather, Missy, Lisa, Monica, and Mom and Dad — Thank you. NAJAC — All those songs and roses. Good-bye doesn't mean forever.

Karen Malachowski: Any time you are feeling kind of blue. And you find your heart is filled with sorrow, chances are, that as bad as things appear, they are going to improve tomorrow. Thanks Mom and Dad for helping me get to where I am now. B.L., C.M., B.G., K.S., S.S., M.B., L.B., J.B., and J.T. Remember all the good times and parties. Good luck to you all! Later on Lake Braddock. Ocean City here we come. You know what I'm saying?!!

David Yun: Yo! W.H.I. Good luck with J.K. Don't get the twins jealous. Thanks S.Y. for you know what.

Darrell Zemitis: I'm at a loss for words. MY 6 years at this school have been incredible. I'd like to thank my teachers and parents for making me what I am today, whatever that is. I guess I should thank everyone for all the great times here, like the shower. Vitamin C. Achoo. Nooo you're not. Squirting. Dibbs. Stu. Shaving cream. The Peanut Gallery. THANKS EVERYONE. Special thanks to BAF for all the great times. you're so great. Your family is too. What a babe. Golly. Graduation. Ack! It's all lunacy.

Anita Zuberi: "Love all God's creation the whole and every grain of sand in it. Love every leaf every ray of God's light. Love the animals, love the plants, love everything. If you love everything, you will perceive the divine mystery in things; once you perceive it, you will begin to comprehend it better every day. And you will come at last to love the whole world with an all-embracing love." Thanks for teaching me how to love and love, U.S.A.!

Joyce & Zwiirbaum: Archy, Tou jours gail! Tou jours gail! There's still a dance in the old dame yet. — Don Marquis archy and Mehtabil.

On the move

Being a junior meant many different things to many different people — 846 people to be exact.

Most juniors realized this year was probably their toughest year in high school; the year colleges really looked at; colleges yet another thing to think about. But first, juniors had to take their PSAT's and SAT's plus many tough preparation courses. Classes were harder with much more homework, plus, sharing space in SSV and SSVI with seniors was not always easy.

In spite of these few obstacles, there were many bright spots that juniors had to look forward to; the thrill of class rings and wondering who would turn them the 87th time, the anticipation of weekends spent with friends and not worrying about schoolwork, making better friends and getting more involved in school activities, but most of all, juniors enjoyed the excitement of knowing that only one year stood between them and being seniors — the most coveted and respected year in high school.

Knowing there were so many little things that meant a lot to the class of '87 gave many juniors the feeling that they were embarking on a great year.

During the homecoming parade, members of the class of '87 ride on the back of the truck on the ride to the school.

Class of 1987

Away to Williamsburg

At 6:45 on the morning of Oct. 8 and also on the morning of the 9th, a sleepy group of juniors met in front of the school, climbed aboard a group of charter buses, and set off for a day at Williamsburg.

By the time they arrived they were fully awake. The staff of Colonial Williamsburg asked them to pick an area of interest. Everybody had choices of Archaeology, Architecture, Government, Minorities, and the Revolution. Then everyone broke up into groups and their guides preceded with an exciting peek into pre-Revolutionary America.

At about noon, everyone met back in the Williamsburg Cafeteria for lunch. After eating, the juniors were given free time to do whatever they wanted to do.

Many students went to the campus of William and Mary. There they visited the campus bookstore and bought W&M sweatshirts and other souvenirs.

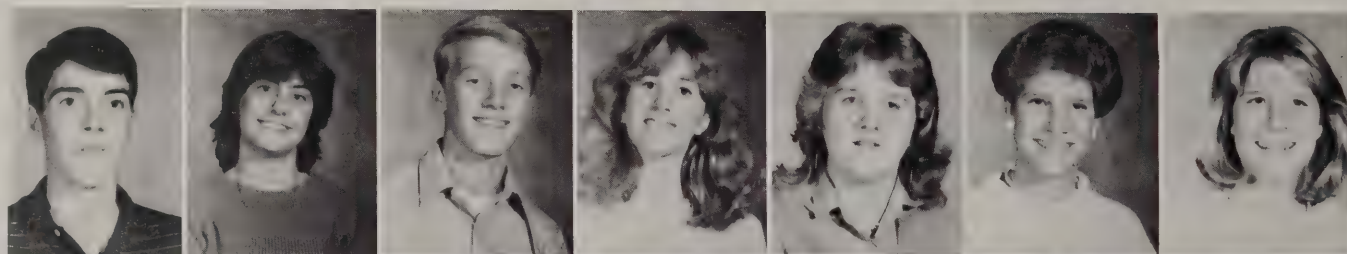

Others visited local stores and shopped during their free time. Some juniors put their stomachs first and ate dinner.

After a long day, juniors boarded the bus for the three hour ride home. The juniors got back to Lake Braddock at 8:30 p.m. happy, but tired after a trip which, Heather Matz and Grainne Bulman said "We'll never forget."

This year's junior class officers were determined to make this a great year for the class of '87.

Taking on the overwhelming task of president was Rob Habibion. Filling the job of vice-president was Jenny Saffron. The secretary was Kirsten Hawley, and John Bolt was the treasurer. Meredith Webb assumed the responsibility of being historian, and representing the class of '87 in the S.G.A. was Jeanette Ramirez.

The officers started the year by holding meetings to decide and organize what they would do throughout the year.

The class of '87 activities included a cake walk at the Fall Festival, painting the bleachers, building a float, organizing dances, and holding the ring breakfast.

Of course, the juniors participated in Spirit Week, and the officers organized the junior activity in the Spring Fling.

The officers' main goal was, according to Jenny Saffron, "to get the juniors more aware of what was going on."

The officers accomplished their objective, with the help of the Class Council as juniors had their best year yet.

Treasurer Jon Bolt, secretary Kirsten Hawley, historian Meredith Webb, president Rob Habibion, and vice president Jenny Saffron get the year off to a flying start as they show their enthusiasm.

Juniors meet their test

Arriving early to school on Saturday, October 19, were many tired and not so excited looking juniors. They came to experience a long awaited event — PSAT's.

Otherwise known as Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Tests, many juniors took these in order to prepare for the future SAT's. These tests were also designed to see who qualified for the National Merit Scholarship Program.

The PSAT/NMSQT measures developed verbal and mathematic reasoning abilities. It also tested one's ability to reason with facts rather than to recall and recite them.

The testing took place in the cafeteria, and in SSV and SSVI. One student commented, "I had to take the test in the cafeteria, and it was so cold in there, I could barely concentrate on what I was doing."

After completing the tests, many juniors felt that they were truly prepared for the test. As one junior commented "A lot of the vocabulary we had in 10th grade was on the test — it really helped to have learned it then."

Dana Boone relaxes before having to take the PSAT's.

Turn me around

It was a typical warm day in the spring of 1985. During 2nd period, rising juniors heard an unusual but exciting announcement. Class rings would be ordered in the spring, and delivered in the fall of their junior year.

Within a week, the Balfour representatives were in the cafeteria showing the various styles of rings offered. Then, rings were ordered and the wait began.

On October 23, the rings were delivered. The ring breakfast was held in the cafeteria from 7:30 AM until 9:05 AM — the end of first period.

As the juniors entered the cafeteria they were directed as to where to get their rings. After standing in alphabetical lines, the juniors finally received their rings. They were then served milk, orange juice, doughnuts and bagels. Class announcements were made, and superlatives were announced. Juniors then participated in a familiar tradition — getting their rings turned. For the junior class, this was an exciting day. As one junior said, "Getting my ring really made me realize just how soon it would be until I'm a senior!"

Juniors take third

Homecoming week, October 6-12 gave many juniors a needed lift in the occasionally dull everyday life. The juniors came in third place overall when all the event points were tallied.

At the beginning of the week, the two Homecoming Court representatives were announced. They were Paige Geiger and Michelle Kime.

Point wise the juniors did well. For the Beautification, all classes did their best to make Lake Braddock look its best. Juniors came in second. In Tuesday night's Fall Follies, they took 4th place. The bonfire dummy took 6th place. At the pep rally on Friday, Peter Schultz came in 3rd for the class. In the spirit yell, the juniors came in right behind the first place seniors. And to cap the week off, the juniors got 3rd place in the float competition.

For many juniors, Homecoming week united the class. Jenny Saffron class vice-president commented, "I was so happy to see so many people come help with the float, I actually couldn't believe it!"

'87 takes the cake

If there is one thing the junior class needs more than anything else it is money. This year the Class of '87 worked for just that by participating in the fun of Fall Festival.

They sponsored a cake walk, which not only proved to be a popular event but was a smashing success.

The week before Fall Festival many announcements were heard for all culinary-minded juniors to start baking, and they did! The booth opened with about 70 cakes to give away.

September 21 turned out to be a bright, sunny Saturday and business was booming. Most of the officers worked all day, while class members worked in shifts.

Jannette Ramirez said, "It was successful and we made a lot of money."

So you see the class of '87 had their cake and ate it too.

Members of the class of '87 man the cake walk booth while participants wait anxiously to see who won the next cake.

Two shining stars

Two members of the junior class, Jennifer Hayghe and Yuri Kim are both talented and accomplished musicians at the age of 16. Both, having taken piano lessons for over ten years, have won many competitions and awards, both local and national.

In 1984, Yuri was a tape audition winner for Seventeen Magazine and General Motors annual concerto competition which was held in Ohio. Another highlight of Yuri's piano career came when she was on three spotlight features on WGMS, a Washington radio station. Having spent three summers at music camp, has helped Yuri gain confidence as well as playing experience.

Yuri commented that "spending the past summer at Aspen Musical School and being around so many world renowned musicians, was a great experience, not to mention being a lot of fun!"

Jennifer Hayghe was the 1985 winner of the National Symphony Orchestra's Young Soloist Competition in 1985. In 1984, Jennifer appeared on Maryland Public Television in the "Musical Encounters" series sponsored by the Young Musicians Foundation, a rare and exciting opportunity. When asked what her most memorable moment in playing was Jennifer responded "winning the National Symphony contest last year was unbelievable. It was my first year that I'd entered, and many others had competed in this before. Hearing my name called was something I'll never forget!"

Jennifer Hayghe and Yuri Kim practice a piece for an upcoming performance.

Bonjour Bruins

One of the greatest opportunities offered to French students at Lake Braddock was the Foreign Exchange Student Program.

This program was offered to students in French II, III, and IV who had a B average in all their classes, had good teacher character recommendations, and were able to speak French well. Another quality that was desirable was that of being outgoing — not afraid to speak the foreign language.

Last year about 15 students participated in the program and the numbers this year were about the same.

The students, mostly 3rd and 4th level juniors and seniors, went to France in February, for three weeks. They spent their first 2 ½ weeks living with a French family and attending a French high school. Then for their last week they had free time in Paris.

In March, the rest of the exchange took place. The French students came here in March for three weeks. They lived with the Lake Braddock student who stayed in their house in France, and attended Lake Braddock.

"Everyone who went benefited, learned a lot, and had a lot of fun," commented Debbie Olitsky.

Coming to an end

For the class of '87, who at last managed to struggle down to the upper class end of the hall, the 1985-86 school year was definitely one to be remembered.

Since the class of '87 received their class rings in the fall of the year, the juniors shared a renewed sense of class pride and unity. Entering their junior year, the class of '87 realized that college and future education was quickly becoming a reality.

Suddenly juniors were overwhelmed with the PSAT's and SAT's. They learned that academically this year was crucial. In addition to the pressures of school, the extra-curricular activities soared this year for the juniors. The class of '87 could now participate more readily in varsity athletics and other activities such as club meetings and dances.

Since their junior year was one packed full of accomplishments both academic and extra-curricular, the class of 1987 demonstrated that with the talent they possessed, their remaining days at Lake Braddock will indeed be a memorable time.

A group of juniors share laughs together before the school day begins.

WELCOME BACK CLASS OF '88

As the years roll on

Sophomore year. What did it mean? For the class of '88, those two words had many different meanings. For some it meant being one year closer to graduation; for others it meant being able to get all the more involved with school activities.

On the academic side, there was no history requirement for tenth grade, so students had an opportunity to take interesting electives. Even though classes continued getting harder, students often had a chance to express their creativity. As a part of the last required year of P.E., driver education was included in most sophomores' curriculum.

After school, sophomores could be found participating in junior varsity sports, with some athletes on varsity teams. There were also clubs for almost every interest.

The class officers anticipated a good year for the class and planned activities to get more people involved, such as class council meetings and class social events. The sophomores started the year with positive spirit and it continued to shine throughout the year. Several sophomores commented:

Kristin Calvert — I think it's great to be a part of such a spirited class!!

Stephanie Backman — Being a senior would be almost as fun!

Anticipating a newly landscaped school, Mia Macaluso, Yvonne Ruby, Barbara Brazeale, and Cheryl Dix help out on Beautification day by laying down mulch.

SOPHOMORES

Class of 1988

Teamwork was a key word in the role of a class of 88 officer. Together President Lisa Farrow, Vice President Malissa White, Secretary Cheryl Dix, Treasurer Matt Erskine, and SGA Representative Kristin Calvert led Lake Braddock's largest class through the school year. Their duties ranged from making chocolate bears for the sophomore booth at the Fall Festival to seeing that the Homecoming float made it to the parade.

Communicating with students about class and school events, as well as drawing them into activities was a major goal of the officers that year. To aid in achieving this, a class council was formed. The council, which was open to all sophomores, reflected information back to the English class they represented. President Lisa Farrow explains, "It was a big success; we had a lot more people involved than ever before."

Even though they had many responsibilities, all the officers seemed to agree with Treasurer Matt Erskine when he said, "Being a class officer has been a terrific opportunity and experience for both me and the other class officers."

For many sophomores, the '85-'86 school year was their first opportunity to break away from a strict "academic" only schedule and partake in one of the many electives offered at the high school level at Lake Braddock.

One such class was photography. The course's curriculum included learning the photographic art, as well as the mechanics of taking pictures. Other skills learned ranged from making proof sheets to learning how to develop pictures. The students, though intent on improving their talent, enjoyed and appreciated the opportunity to exert some initiative in a classroom atmosphere. Tim Dugan summed up the feelings of most photography students when he said, "Photography is hip!"

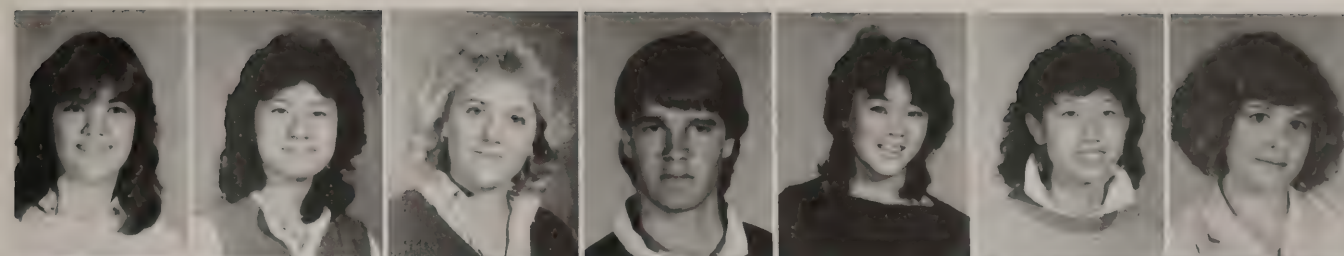

For one semester students in metal and jewelry design learned how to transform metal and lumps of clay into professional quality jewelry. For them expressing themselves while pursuing future plans became a profitable undergoing.

In architectural drawing students were taught the basis of planning layouts, as well as drawing blueprints. For students in this class independent exploration of the many fields of architectural drawing was encouraged.

All in all, everyone enjoyed the new found opportunities awarded through electives.

Intently working on their architectural drawing projects are Corey Shane and Ron Summers.

Funding the fun way

Everytime students bought a ticket to a class of '88 sponsored dance, they were actually helping to support that class. Or whenever someone played a round of the lollipop tree at the Fall Festival, he or she was once again supporting the sophomore class funds, while having fun.

Sophomore class sponsor Mrs. Karen Tarlano explained, "There's a limited amount of ways for a class to raise money." Most of a class's income is supplied through profits of a dance, of which an initial 10% goes to the Student Government Association. Most of the money the class of '88 made from dances and other smaller money making ventures went into savings for graduation proceedings. These proceedings include the senior prom and the class's gift to the school.

Dances were the sophomore class's main way of raising money, but other undergoings such as the Fall Festival booth and selling T-shirts supplemented this income.

Can't get there from here

"How are we going to get there?" was one of the most often asked questions among sophomores as the school year began. No longer wanting to be chauffeured everywhere by parents, sophomores had to come up with other ways of reaching their destination.

For people who lived close by, walking was a possibility, as proved by Nicole Andersen, who said she and her friends walked to school almost every day. Other students relied on older friends for rides, but for the most part, tenth graders could only wait for their sweet sixteen and the completion of drivers' education.

Driver education. The general feeling was that the information wasn't hard to grasp. As Kristy Gambrell stated, "Most of the class was just common sense." Despite this fact, students found studying was necessary, and were glad when they were finished and eligible for their licenses.

As the year progressed and more and more birthdays passed, more and more cars appeared around the school. Sophomores could be found crowding into each other's cars and "cruising" with their new freedom. Summing up how she felt about getting her license, Kris Jones exclaimed, "It's great!"

Life after the bell

As the year rolled by, an increasing number of sophomores gained the most noted privilege of 10th grade, receiving their driver's license. With this came a new meaning to the words weekend and vacation. With this newly achieved freedom, sophomores had the ability to plan weekends and vacations that once depended on the mood of parents. But exactly what do sophomores do on their weekends? The following members of the class of '88 were polled to offer insight to 10th graders' weekends:

Richard Biondi: "I go to the beach, and water ski."

Todd Fredrikson: "Sleep!"

Julie Dorough: "I go to Georgetown."

Moji Sabiriford: "I go to football games, and on summer vacations people usually go to their grandmother's house or something."

Mark Nagy: "I think about the universe and my place in it — constantly."

Anne Hyatt: "I spend time with friends."

Michelle Dyer: "People usually watch T.V., or go out with friends and shop."

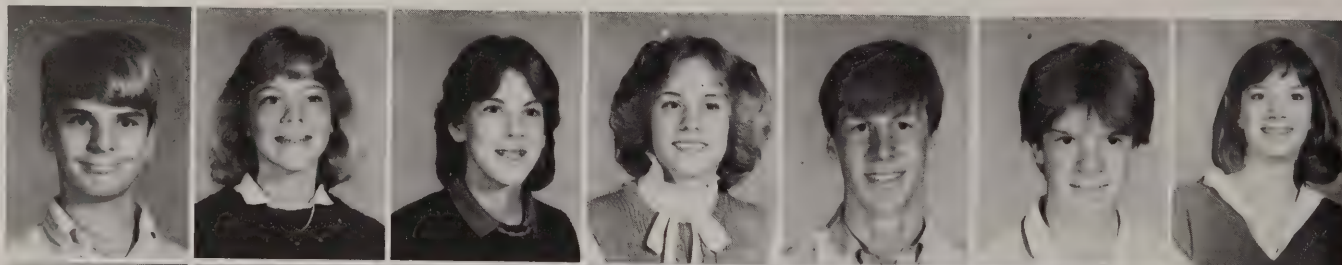

Brett Kirlay: "I either ride my bike freestyle or water ski."

Sharing good times

As students reached their sophomore year, a large amount of their time was spent socializing. The class officers realized this, and in order to make social planning a little bit easier for everyone, they scheduled several class social activities. This provided the opportunity for anyone in the class to make new friends and have fun times with their old ones, and to have it all planned for them.

The first official social gathering of the class of '88 was their back-to-school picnic. It was held at Burke Lake and lasted six hours. All sophomores were invited, and were asked to bring their own food and drinks. Throughout the afternoon there were games of frisbee, football, and catch, as well as time spent lying out in the sun, talking, and eating. The picnic was a great success and formed new bonds among friends.

For new students, there was an ice cream social one day after school. The class treasury provided the ice cream, and all new students were invited to get to know each other and maybe share their opinions of their new school.

During homecoming week there were also float making parties, where although everyone was working to finish the float, the talk ranged from pets to homecoming dates. It was yet another chance for sophomores to get to know their classmates.

These events paid off as throughout the year, the class became more unified. The opportunities were there, and when students used them they met a lot of nice people who had probably been there all along.

Style Reborn

A few years ago if a student at Lake Braddock had been asked for their idea of what a mod was all that would have been received for an answer was a blank look. The '85-'86 school year was different.

"We're bringing back a style that should have never died," explained Keith Willis, Peter Lamporte, and Tim Dugan of the current revival of the '60's British scene. Well depicted in the movie "Quadrophenia," mod is not a state of mind or a certain philosophy, but rather a style of clothes and music. Keith Willis said, "Mods really have no special views except liking music, having a good time, and being carefree. "Ranging from '60's rhythm and blues, SKA, a blend of reggae and rock and new and old psychedelic, mod music includes bands such as The Who, The Creation, The Specials, and The Jam, all of whose songs reflect teenage feelings.

Mod clothing stresses the concept of clean cut style. This style originated in the lower class of England during the '60's mod movement. Also, by the mixing of black and white in their clothes mods express their only view, that of anti-racism.

"You don't have to try; you just have to groove with the music," said Tim Dugan of the music and clothes oriented, clean cut style . . . mod.

Not just another face in the crowd

At every float construction party or class council meeting, one face was sure to be seen, that of Cricket Mees. Cricket, a sophomore here at Lake Braddock, stood out among her peers as a student with overflowing spirit and leadership abilities.

Lake Braddock was not the only organization to recognize Cricket as an exceptional leader. She was selected to attend a leadership conference given by the Hugh O'Brian Leadership Foundation. Two other students, Jodie Brandt and Chris Lounderman were also chosen to attend this conference. Cricket then went on to be selected to take part in a national leadership seminar. This seminar, called the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation (HOBY), was a summer program running in one week sessions at Purdue University. Cricket was chosen to receive these honors through the basis of her application and academic performance.

Cricket also stood out as a student with enormous school spirit. A member of the Key Club and Class Council, Cricket explained, "I try to get involved as much as possible." Being a student new to Lake Braddock last year, Cricket could be heard at the new student ice cream social where she gave a speech on being a new student. Cricket's spirit could be seen at just about any school event. Said Cricket, "I really love Lake Braddock, it's a great school!"

During the Fall Follies, the sophomore class put on a spectacle called "Jellicle Bears" — a take off on the musical Cats. Adding to the skit was a show stopping solo sung by Karen Rives, which placed the class in second for the spirit banner. Following Fall Follies, the bonfire sparked enthusiasm throughout the class. Although placing sixth in the dummy competition, the class of '88 showed their dominance at the pep rally. While beating the freshman class in yelling, sophomore, Frank DeRonja ate his way to a superb second place finish in the ice cream eating contest.

vided students with a sense of pride and amazement with its creativity. The class of '88 float consisted of a gold star with a moving bear next to it, representing the "Bruins on Broadway" theme. The sophomore class proved their independent talent by placing a fantastic third in the float competition.

Chosen as sophomore princesses, Lisa Farrow and Jessica French were two of the eleven stars on the Homecoming Court.

Finishing off a successful year, the sophomore class looked back at their worthy accomplishments at Homecoming.

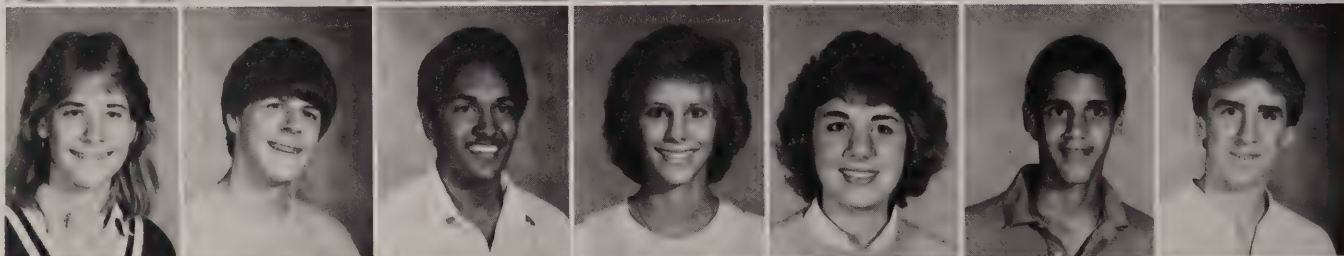

Just beginning to stuff the skirt for the sophomore float, Malissa White, Teresa Arcona, and Kristin Calvert work among piles of flowers.

Moving on

As the school year drew to a close, sophomores experienced mixed emotions. Some were anxious for summer and for their junior year because it meant they were closer to graduation. But there was also a sad feeling as once again school ended and students had to say goodbye to friends.

Sophomore year proved to be as successful as officers and sponsors had hoped. The class was unified, and throughout the school year students were eager to participate in class activities.

The end of their sophomore year was a turning point for most people. It was their last year of P.E., and a more difficult academic schedule lay ahead. But with the added responsibility came new freedom also. Almost everyone had received their license and had begun to look for summer jobs.

Several sophomores expressed their feelings at the end of the year:

Suzanne Thomas — Gorgeous guys, rad times, and lots of fun. Tenth grade was great!

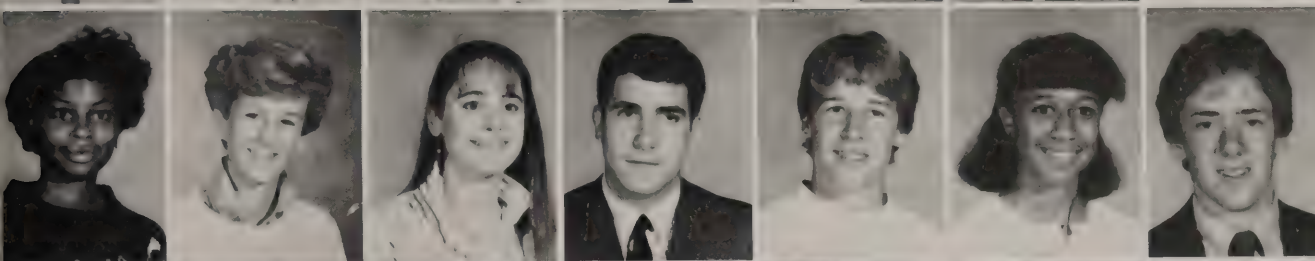

Rachel Manasan — When does the fun start?

Eva Shafer — Um . . . This has been a pretty cool year . . . Um.

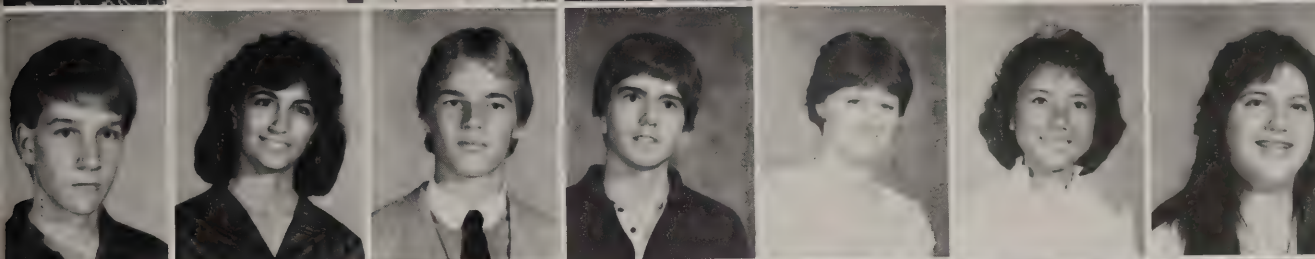

At the last dance of the school year, Michelle Sperry and Jennifer Rawlins discuss summer plans with a friend.

Every minute counts

Being a freshman brought a completely new outlook on attending Lake Braddock. Structurally, the building was the same, and many of the students and faculty were the same. But, from the beginning of this year, the class of '89 could sense that something was different.

Everyone was a little more serious and felt an air of concern. Students were displaying an intense interest in classes for the first time. So many different classes were available to choose from, each with a different teacher. It was to be a year of more responsibility (oh no!) and new privileges (yeah!).

As freshmen, academia was suddenly very important. Why? Because if you want to be a doctor, computer scientist or lawyer, then good grades in science, math, and history seemed essential to get accepted into a major college. Suddenly the class of '89 realized that the subjects they selected now would determine the colleges that they could attend in four years, and the profession they would pursue for the rest of their lives (oh! how awesome!).

It wasn't all seriousness or work though. Along with new responsibilities came the satisfaction of great accomplishments, from an A on that difficult report in English, to acing the exam in World Cultures.

The new privileges also brought many good times and memories that would be cherished forever. These included dances, frosh sports, and the activities of what appeared to be a hundred clubs.

The secretaries of Subschool 3 are always ready to help as Mrs. Haynes and Mrs. Tiches prove by writing a pass for Craig Griffith.

Smiling together Tamara Golden and Sam Jordan show that friends are another way to make their freshmen year special.

'89 bears up to privileges

Freshmen are often pushed around by the upperclassmen, but being at the bottom of the high school ladder isn't all that bad. The freshmen had many advantages. Being in 9th grade meant you were able to try out for all sports. The boys had their own freshmen football, basketball, wrestling, and baseball teams, while the girls had their own cheerleading squads.

Freshmen had the opportunity to join clubs and activities. The class of '89 actively participated in all traditional Bruin activities, such as Fall Follies and making their own float for Homecoming. Two other freshmen privileges were able to pick their own P.E. classes and going to football games without their parents. Some, like Kristen Sweeting thought the best part of all the new freshmen activities was "being able to go to the high school Dances." Carol DeAngelis summed it all up by saying "you just feel more like a part of the school."

Digging out her pom-poms is Katie Harris ready to start a successful season of freshman cheerleading.

Bull's eye wins

Fall Festival was held September 21 to raise money for clubs and classes. The sponsors used class council meetings to find volunteers. There was an abundance of students willing to participate in the Fall Festival.

The ninth grade booth, the Balloon Dart Toss, was sponsored by Mrs. Anita Meincke, who commented that a large number of "good, dependable workers" helped out. Working in one hour intervals throughout the day helped make the booth a success. In order to win candy or finger puppets, students had to burst one balloon. If students burst two balloons, they received a lei, a Hawaiian necklace. If you were lucky and burst three balloons, you got a frisbee.

In addition to working in the booth, freshmen had the chore of blowing up more than a thousand balloons, with the help of Mrs. Meincke. With a profit of 100-150 dollars, the air that went into those balloons was worth it!

We've only just begun . . .

The start of the school year meant many big changes for the freshman class officers. They were beginning high school and taking on more responsibility. The class council, President Stacey Moore, Vice President Matt Schleyer, Secretary Susan Shearer, Treasurer Jason Harris, Historian Susan Engel, and the S.G.A. representative Sasha Walker, had a lot of work to do. They had set high goals and worked hard to achieve them. The officers wanted to get the members of their class more involved with school functions and activities, and also organize and plan activities that would interest the class as a whole, as well as each freshman individually.

The freshmen started off the year by sponsoring a dance. The disc jockey had connected all the equipment to one circuit, which blew, leaving over eight hundred people in the dark. Though some were scared at first, it turned out that everyone had a great time.

The class had fun and raised money to put towards its other projects. The officers played a big part in making this year successful. The freshmen were off to a great beginning at Lake Braddock!

Heading off the ninth grade year are the class council Susan Shearer, Stacey Moore, Susan Engel, Sasha Walker and Matt Schleyer.

Freshman focus on flair

Walking down the freshman hall, it was hard not to notice the focus on fashion, music, and hair styles. The emphasis on being unique and dazzling was seen throughout the year.

What's the first thing to notice on guys and girls? Many students say clothes are the top priority. The brands most widely seen were Esprit, Levi's, Chuck Taylor High Tops, Forenza, and Guess. Those who dared to be "different" wore anything from paisley, geometric designs, plaid, and lace, to concert shirts, overcoats, and thrift shop odds and ends. The trend-setters who seemed to influence the way the freshmen looked were Madonna and Prince. Summing up the freshmen fashion mode, Vanessa Rippe said, Peter Grace shows perfect taste wearing his rugby shirt — a main fashion trend.

"I think people should try to be different."

Music made a statement, whether it was Bryan Adams, U2, or Siouxsie and the Banshees. "I like soft rock like Phil Collins, and I try to be as new-wave as possible," said Sean Leshner. The variety of music ranged from funk, pop, and new-wave, to hard-core punk. The type of music people listened to often indicated the way they dressed.

The year was a popular time for extra-ordinary hair-cuts. Some freshmen guys wore their hair short, spiked, or with a tail. Some of the girls, on the other hand, had layered, shaved, spiked, or one length style of hair. "None of us (my friends) have our natural hair color," said Anna Baca. The difference in hair styles made each person an eye-catcher.

Even though fashions, music, and hair styles changed throughout the year, one thing never changed; the desire to be noticed!

Freshmen folly for fun

In the wake of Homecoming, the freshman hallways were bustling with students talking about the 1985 Fall Follies. The year's theme was Bruins on Broadway. The students rehearsed for approximately twenty hours, but were pressed for time as Fall Follies approached. The idea for the freshman skit was created by Chris Ammon.

A total of thirty people helped in production, writing the scripts, and by performing. The theme of the skit was peers are the ones who know you best.

The skit consisted of three main characters. The spotlight was on two characters, Pam Gildea and Tag Greason, who by playing themselves, remembered past Fall Follies. The director, portrayed by Paul Consagra, started the skit as he put the cast in their places. The participants played the parts of Lake Braddock's cheerleaders, fans, and football teams. Also, they portrayed West Springfield's cheerleaders, fans, and football team. Lake Braddock proceeded to "smear" the Spartans.

Despite the disappointment of not winning Fall Follies, the performers had fun. According to Emma Schleede, "It felt good to be up there and have people clapping for you."

Perhaps next year's freshman skit will win first place. No matter what, though, the class will return to have fun together again.

Tag Greason and Pam Gildea wait anxiously to introduce the freshman entry for the 1985 Fall Follies.

After the facts . . .

For the class of '89, school was more than a learning experience; it was a chance to "socialize," exclaimed freshman J. J. Mink and Susan Shearer. Students found time before and after school to meet and discuss everything from homework to weekend dates. By eight o'clock every morning the halls were buzzing with hundreds of separate conversations. Many people would gather at a certain locker and then walk around while catching up on the latest gossip. There was no hurry to get to class until the bell rang, as hasty goodbyes were said and as locker doors slammed shut.

After school, freshmen found many new activities that weren't offered to them as intermediates. Many wanted to get involved. When she made the Swing Singers, Lissa Rideout happily said, "Now I finally have an after school activity!" Marching band, football, field hockey and SADD were some of the favorites of the freshman class. But what about when they got home? "I just can't live without talking to or seeing someone after I get home" commented Rachel Olitsky.

"And I can't wait to get home and see General Hospital!" added Ann Colly, summing up the feelings of many in their class. If they could get a ride, many freshmen would see a movie, hang out at a local mall, or on a Wednesday night go to Young Life.

What does the class of 1989 stand for? Many freshmen asked this question throughout the year. The answers came in stride as the questions who, what, and where glared from the paper waiting to be answered.

This survey was different in that it polled the class of '89 exclusively. Here are the results!

Steps to stardom

"Steps to Stardom" was the theme that captured first place for the Class of 1989 in the 1985 Homecoming Float competition. The float was constructed at Susan Shearer's house by twenty freshmen. Contrary to a few accusations, the freshman class had no help from professional builders or architects.

The completed project depicted a Bruin with a top hat standing on golden steps.

The float was made from tissues which were bought with money from the class treasury. Also, left over tissues from the freshman's contest last year were used. Accompanying the float were the freshman cheerleading squad and several students.

Mandy Cole and Mindy Parker were chosen as the class' Homecoming court. They were presented to the student body during the Homecoming Dance. Kim Agnew commented, "I thought it was really nice. It was fun being with friends and just having a wonderful evening."

It came from New Jersey

Mr. Cabiati has been roaming the halls of the school and teaching classes since this school opened in 1972. Many students have enjoyed and at the same time suffered through his classes. He stands out in Lake Braddock as a good teacher and, to many, as a friend.

Many people don't know where Mr. Cabiati came from and what he does after the bell rings at 2:30. He was born in Jersey City, New Jersey and grew up in Newark and Elizabeth, New Jersey. Before he became a teacher, he led an illustrious life. He worked as a truck driver, bartender, construction worker, and as a manager for a retail ski shop. When he began teaching, he taught English. Since then, he's taught World Cultures to ninth graders. When asked how his own ninth grade year was, he replied "I had a very difficult year. Academically I was horrible, socially I was inept and personally I was miserable. Fortunately I grew up."

Mr. Cabiati went on to Penn State as an All-American setting track records in high jump which Nittany Lions are still talking about. As an adult he can often be found jumping after his 3-year old son Nicholas or jogging, playing tennis, golfing, and visiting fine restaurants.

Mr. Cabiati looks doubtful but David Moss still thinks he deserves an A.

Freshmen finale

The year passed by and the class of '89 had their own special memories. Freshman firsts included the Homecoming dance, participating in high school sports, and moving one year closer to getting the coveted drivers' license.

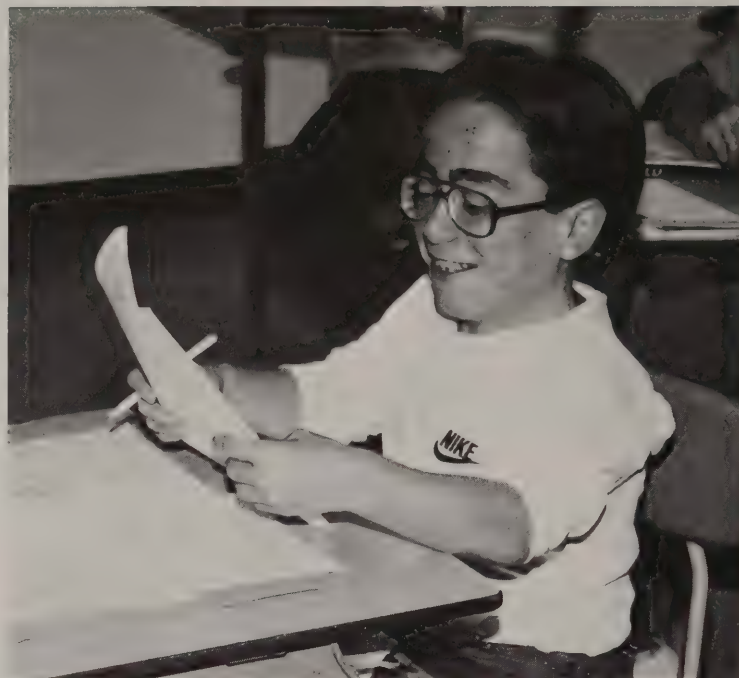

However, the freshmen were not only concerned about Homecoming and sports. It was also a year of growing, maturing, and learning practical skills as they grew into fine young adults.

having a crush on seniors."

As the year drew to a close, the freshmen reflected on all the good times as well as the difficult ones. To Amy Rior-dan, having a good time meant participating in high school activities and having a wider selection of guys. Most freshmen can also recall some difficult times, such as adjusting to the demands of high school standards. Before they knew it, the freshmen found themselves being pushed up into the role of being sophomores.

Bright beginning

For the class of 1990, the year began on a bright note. The excitement was high in Subschool II as the eighth graders got reacquainted with old friends. With help from Mrs. Kathy Palmer, the eighth grade sponsor, students got oriented with their new schedules.

When asked what the best thing about coming back to school was, one student immediately replied, "now that I'm an eighth grader, and not a little sevie, I have someone to push around." That was felt throughout all of the eighth grade class. No longer being at the bottom of the ladder was the best part of becoming an eighth grader.

They were more comfortable with their surroundings and with each other. They began to come together as a class through participating in various activities. Even though there was a lot behind them, eighth graders knew there were many new things to come.

For the class of 1990, with more than 670 in their class, the 1985-86 school year proved to be a bright and memorable one!

With three returning officers, President Susan Lee, Treasurer Andrea Seward, and Historian Cynthia Kravetz and three newly elected officers, Vice President Jenny Sligh, Secretary Catie Stephans and SGA Representative Sue Saunders, the class of 1990 was led by six female students and their female sponsor Ms. Kathy Palmer.

"Our goal this year is to keep the class together. We're starting to separate and lose touch with each other because of the different lunch shifts," commented Susan Lee.

In an attempt to keep the class united and to have a good time, the officers planned various activities throughout the year. Early class activities revolved around Homecoming with the making of the float, competition for the Spirit Banner and Fall Follies. Later events included Gifts for the Washington Homeless drive, the class of '90 movie and a class trip to Innerquest.

The seven woman team of officers devoted the year to involving all students of the class of 1990 in fun and worthwhile activities.

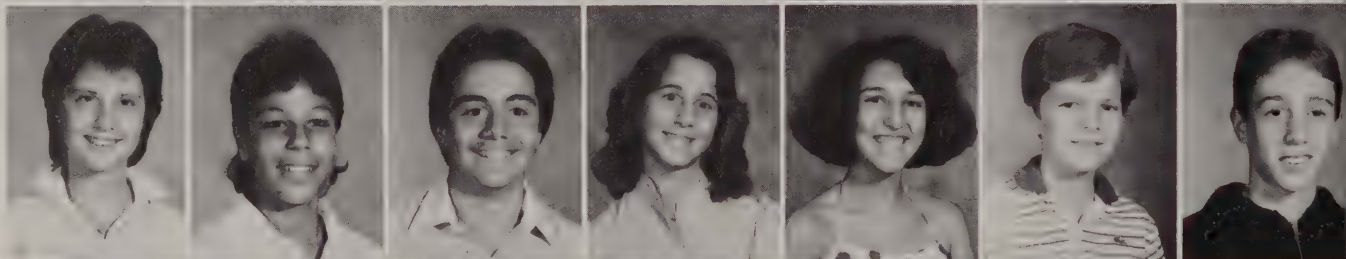

The all female officers of the class of '90 are Cynthia Kravetz, Catie Stephans, Sue Saunders, Susan Lee, Jennifer Sligh and Andrea Seward.

Girl talk

“Did you hear that Mark asked Jennifer to go steady with him?”

“Did she say yes?”

“You bet, she’s crazy about him.”

“Where’s my curling iron?”

“Which looks better — the blue or light gray eyeshadow?”

“The blue; it goes better with your dress.”

“Does this hat make my face look fat? I hope not, I’m gonna meet Danny after first. I think he’s gonna ask me out.”

“Susan, you’re so lucky!”

“Who put Keith’s phone number on the wall? Doesn’t everyone know we’re going out? Give me a pen so I can scratch it out.”

“Does Lisa love Lee?”

“I don’t know. Why?”

“That’s what it says on the wall.”

“Then I guess so.”

“That’s the bell. We have five minutes to get to class.”

“I hope my hair looks alright.”

Before school and in between classes the bathroom became the converging place for many eighth grade girls. Here the latest gossip and weekend plans were talked about with the usual glance in the mirror before hurrying to the next class of the day.

Sue Saunders combs her hair and catches up on the latest gossip with Wendy Luedtke.

Sports for weekdays

From 2:30 to 3:30 every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday intramurals were held in the gym for the eighth graders. Since most of sports at Lake Braddock were designed for grades 9-12, intramurals turned out to be a time when the eighth graders could compete and play with their peers. They played on teams in which they selected the players and also those sports in which they wanted to play.

Eighth graders had the choice of being involved in the eighth grade drill team, intermediate gymnastics, wrestling, volleyball and basketball; Basketball was the most popular sport.

Commenting on the intramurals program, Brett Dodds quoted, "Intramurals has given me a chance to meet new people and play sports I enjoy without all the competitive pressure of high school sports."

The sport of field hockey puts diversity in the lives of Jessie Agan, Pat Banks, and Robert Allen.

Magic on Broadway

The Broadway play "Magic Show" was the inspiration behind the intermediate class float during the Homecoming competition.

By using the play "Magic Show" the intermediates combined this year's theme, Bruins On Broadway, with a very creative float. The float featured a Bruin bear on top of a box, with feet emerging from one end and a West Springfield helmet from the other.

The intermediate float travels down Lake Braddock on its way to the football field.

The intermediates spent three weeks making thousands of tissue flowers, before starting the actual construction of their float. "The flower making parties were a lot of fun and the teachers were very helpful allowing us to make flowers during our spare time in class," commented Jason Smith.

It was Mr. Dan Troia's idea and creativity along with the labor and patience of sponsors Mrs. Kathy Palmer, Mrs. Mary Lipsey, Mrs. Susan Boyle and the intermediates that launched this smashing idea.

Last but not least

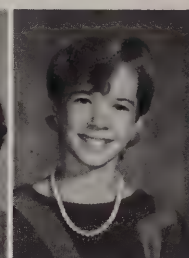

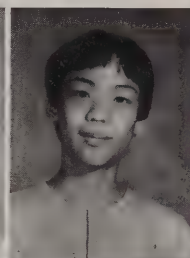

Even though the eighth graders came in last place, they showed a lot of spirit and enthusiasm in this year's Fall Follies. Their skit, which involved a young writer showing that he could have just as much school spirit as a football player, had a lot of class participation and support from the eighth graders, as well as the help from teacher representatives Mrs. Kathy Palmer and Mr. Michael Marioni. Jennifer Morris, commented, "They had trouble getting the point across, but it looked good anyway" adding that next year they'd surely be better. Scott San-Martin summed up the evening saying that even though they came in last place, the eighth graders had some fun and got to show their class spirit to the rest of the school.

During the Fall Follies, eighth graders enthusiastically perform their skit.

Weekends for fun

Buzz! "I can't believe the day is finally over. Where is my math book? See you tomorrow."

It's that time of day, but for Lake Braddock eighth graders, that doesn't mean head for the mountains.

To all different students, after school means one thing: "I like to talk on the phone to my friends, and get all the latest gossip," Andrea Dodge.

"I like to watch General Hospital. I never miss it!" Elizabeth Snodgrass.

"I'm into sports especially soccer and football," said Pat Fontana.

"We hang out and surf dude." Jonathan Gurinsky.

When the day is finally over, eighth graders take time for themselves. They enjoy doing the things they like to do, being with who they like, and this is what makes after-school the most special time of all.

On Friday after school, Marcy Oliver, Susan Dulemba, Brett Harn, Andy Cazalas and Andrea Dodge were ready to begin the weekend.

Afterschool delights

As school ended and weekends began, eighth graders' activities consisted of more than just homework. Among these were hobbies which ranged from shopping at Tysons Corner to skateboarding around the neighborhood.

When asked why they played soccer, a group of girls replied, "It's a hobby that keeps us physically fit!"

For eighth graders Ed Leroy and Marcus Rhee football and basketball were favorite hobbies, while swimming was a favorite Andrew Strauss.

Each student had a hobby and there were a variety of reasons why. Some wanted to stay in shape, others wanted to meet new people and of course many just wanted to have fun.

"It's something to do instead of homework," commented Peter Kalleres referring to his hobby, skateboarding.

Other eighth grade hobbies included gymnastics, watching t.v., and just plain talking.

For Adam Thompson and Greg Selfridge, art is a favorite hobby.

During their English class, Ray Cooksey, Tim Reuss, and Craig Fuller relax as they read aloud.

The best is yet to come

Looking forward to their freshman year, the class of '90 completed their last year as intermediates. Eighth grade was an important year, filled with new and challenging experiences. It was a step above the sevens, which meant more freedom and responsibility.

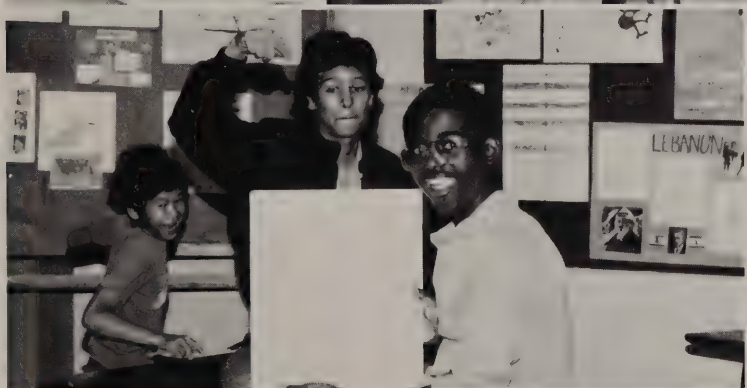

When the time came for the '85-'86 school year to come to an end, they took time out to remember all their memories. Whether it was at the intermediate dances, basketball games, or pep rallies, the class of '90 was always spirited and enthusiastic.

Although most admit being an eighth grader had its advantages, most agreed they were eager to start next year as freshmen. Along with the honor of entering high school came more responsibilities and harder schedules, though most found they were ready for the switch.

Eighth grade was full of many exciting and great times. Even though it may be sad at first to depart from eighth grade, most students felt next year would be filled with even more exciting times.

As the day comes to an end, Karen Johnson, Susan English, and Jessica Lewis are another day closer to finishing their eighth grade year.

Stepping in with class

On August 26, the seventh grade class of 1991 filed into the enormous halls of Lake Braddock. Reagan Avery said, "I almost freaked out when I walked in. It was so big!"

The seventh graders were extremely excited. This was their first year for many new classes such as foreign languages, drama, choir, and shop.

The thrill of having lockers, changing classes, seven lunch lines to choose from, intermediate dances to attend, and hundreds of friends to meet was overwhelming to the new Bruins.

At their first performance of the year, members of the intermediate drill team concentrate on their dance.

Seventh graders Ruby Arca and Trey Daniels await anxiously for the 2:30 bell to ring and for their weekends to begin.

At first, the seventh graders were a bit nervous about being in classes with upperclassmen. Soon they realized that they were treated just like everyone else.

"The upperclassmen just ignore us. I guess it's 'cause we're sebies," stated Kara Garten.

The class of '91 really looked up to the older students. When asked what grade they'd rather be in, many said they'd rather be freshmen. In spite of the fact some wish they were older, the majority said they were content to learn and experience seventh grade on their own.

Through the year, the class of '91 became more sure of themselves and created many lifetime memories. Andrea Dobberman summed it up saying, "I wouldn't have missed it for the world!"

7th GRADE

Benefacting bristers

Among the various clubs formed at Lake Braddock this year, a new one was born and slowly began to develop. The credit went to Jay DuHadway who thought of the idea of having a Big Brother/Big Sister Club. It was not your usual type club where one had to sit and be lectured at or even pay dues, this one was for seventh graders and seniors.

The purpose of the "club" was to give seniors the opportunity to share time with younger people and at the same time help them out with problems, peer pressure and school in general. For seventh graders it was the perfect chance to meet upperclassmen, share fears, excitements and anxieties. It also gave them the chance to get involved in school activities.

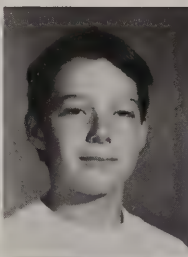

Many seventh graders feel left out being new to a school and once again at the bottom.

This program was designed to make seventh graders feel wanted and to let them know that somebody was there. It was especially helpful for those students who had no brothers or sisters. It gave them the chance to talk to someone other than peers. Brothers and sisters could also share experiences while on outings to Pizza Hut, the ice rink, or even a Redskins game.

As a part of the big brother/big sister program, seventh graders Tracie Smith and Jerel Rauscher talk with their "big-brother" Andy Schwarz about their concerns.

Drilling to the top

With grace, style, and pizzazz, the seventh grade drill team kicked off the school year with their performances at the Fall Festival and Homecoming Parade.

Tryouts for the team were held in mid-September, and were very competitive; only twenty-four of the eighty girls would make it. They had three days to learn the dance routine before performing for the judges, who looked for such things as rhythm, general appearance, and enthusiasm.

The team immediately went to work perfecting their routine for Fall Festival, and for Fall Follies. The long hours paid off, though, in the end through their many exciting performances.

The team was often seen during the year; at pep rallies, assemblies, class night, and at the Toys for Tots Parade. Their participation made the class of '91 feel much more a part of Lake Braddock.

"It was fun for members and sponsors alike," commented Mrs. Cathy Alexander. "As a sponsor of the seventh grade drill team, I enjoyed the opportunity to be involved with students outside the normal classroom atmosphere."

As a part of the intermediate drill team, Ringa Kondratas, Veronica Morey and their leader Emily Stauffer, must practice to get their routine right.

Coming out for "sevie's"

Homecoming was a new and exciting experience for seventh grade Bruins.

Float making parties and Fall Follies were just some of the events. Students and sponsors worked together to complete tasks such as making thousands of flowers for their float, building the bonfire dummy, and perfecting the skit for Fall Follies. The long hours and hard work needed to be put into the activities were not minded by many knowing it would all pay off at the Homecoming parade and game, as the finished products would be seen by many.

Along with the self satisfaction of knowing that one was involved with the class also brought on long lasting friendships and memories one could cherish for a lifetime.

When asked how he felt about Homecoming, Arthur Cotton replied, "It was thrilling to be caught up in all excitement and competition of Homecoming week."

Heather Kaplin, Joe Reinbold and Jimmy Heineman work at the seventh grade booth at the Fall Festival with the hopes that they will raise a lot of money for their class.

Bruins cubs' brunch

It's 10:29. Come on ... One more minute until the bell for lunch. I can't wait!

Life just got a bit more carefree upon hearing the freedom bell and sliding out of the classroom, heading for lunch.

Finally, a chance to talk to Chris! Let's have a party ... No, let's go skating ... No, let's go to the movies ... Can you sleep over at my house? ... No? Well let's plan our weekend on Friday, by the way, have you got some money that you'd like to lend to your best friend? Thanks! Only 10 minutes left of lunch. Let's not waste it! Now it's back to the old treasure chest. Good! Lee is there. "Hey, Lee, what's up? Cute tie! Navy blue and neon green really flatter you.

Just kidding, you're my favorite locker partner!"

Now begins the search for last night's crumpled homework. Oh, where is it? It was here earlier ... honest! Don't you believe me? One of these days I'm going to clean up this mess. Great! Here it is. A little wrinkled perhaps, but ...

Slow down! I'm in no hurry to get to class. Besides, I have this new theory on how locker decor reflects personality. Let's check it out! Mostly present are; fast cars (aggressive), rock stars (dreamers), cute guys and gals (friendly), stickers and decals (exotic), and, of course, the ever popular mirror. Mirrors seem quite vain by emphasizing the head and not the brain.

Displaying their own interests in their locker decorations are seventh graders Carol Jones and Stephanie Hile.

Celebrating youth

Whether it was swaying to Phil Collins and Chicago, or bopping to Madonna and Motley Crue, four times this year the school opened at 7:30 p.m. for the intermediate dances.

The dances lasted until 10:00 p.m. A dress code including collar "shirts" and "no jeans" was enforced. Other rules such as no slam dancing or running were also presented to the students.

A few rules didn't seem to dampen the spirits of the eager seventh and eighth graders. They anxiously awaited the dances and showed much enthusiasm. The dances provided an escape from the monotony of homework and studies. Organized dances allowed students to socialize in a more relaxed atmosphere.

The DJ's, provided by Sound Tech, played the latest hits as well as the favorite golden oldies. The lights and decorations added the final touches to a perfect evening.

Everyone agreed that two and a half hours wasn't long enough for the energetic intermediate students. However everyone was grateful for the opportunity to get together with their friends to dance the night away and to celebrate youth.

Showing their enthusiasm for their first intermediate dance are Matt Fletchall, Gretchen Smith, Shannon Quick, Kerri Arnold, Kristie Megivern and Tammy Longhauser.

Two take the top

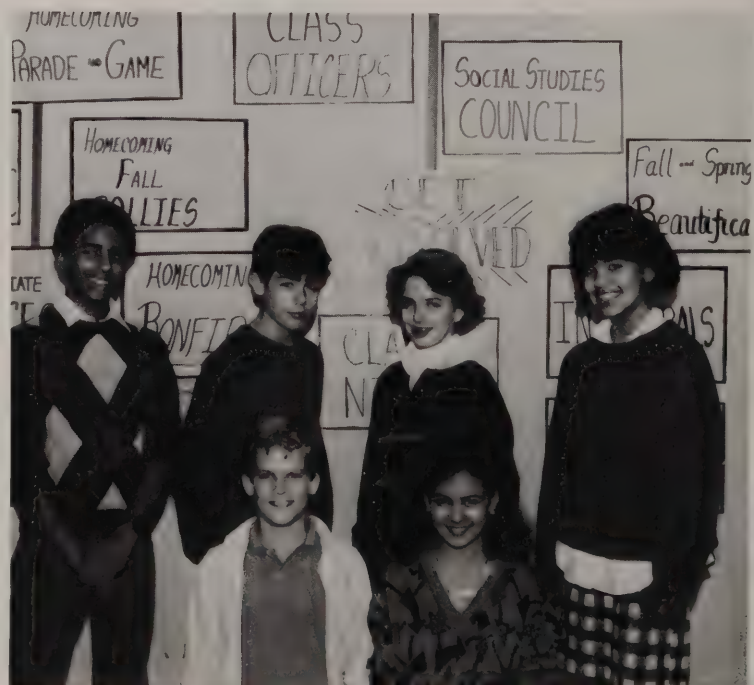

Choosing a leader from over 600 new faces is no easy task for anyone as the class of '91 found out during their November elections. The seventh grade class was made up of students from several different neighborhoods and six elementary schools. Nonetheless, seven students were selected from the crowd to lead the class through the year.

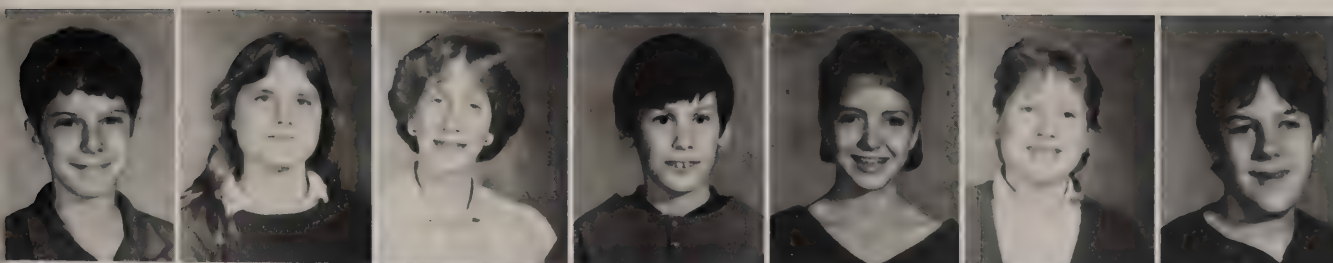

The position of president was shared by Kip Anderson and Joann Santa-Ana. This co-presidency was the result of a dead even election result. Kip and Joann set their objectives to include more social events such as dances and pep rallies and try to get as many people involved in feeling a part of the school as possible.

Other class officers were Charles Ekland, Vice President; Mili Pena, Secretary; Mark Bolt, Treasurer; and Bryan Genzler, Historian. Julie Simpson was elected as the SGA representative.

In front of various student involvement ideas are the class of '91 officers: Kip Anderson and Joann Santa-Ana, Presidents; Charles Ekland, Vice President; Mili Pena, Secretary; Mark Bolt, Treasurer; Julie Simpson, SGA representative.

“Things can only get better”

Adapting well to a new environment, the class of 1991 quickly became a “part” of the school. The change from elementary school helped many discover and try activities that brought out talent and provided helpful experiences. The activities included clubs, intramurals, academics, and dances. As well as more freedom these activities brought more responsibility. The seventh grades seemed to handle it well as the year passed. One seventh grader commented, “It’s good to have responsibilities, it makes you feel older.” On June 11, the students in the class of ’91 were able to say they had learned a lot and had many memories to carry into the years to come.

Getting up there step by step

Little things mean a lot . . .

ATHLETICS

Lake Braddock sports have always provided an option to the academics of the school for students, faculty and parents alike with consistently strong sport teams. This year proved to be no exception as record setting crowds cheered the teams on and the Bruins captured many titles while individuals performed to their fullest.

There were many firsts this year as the Varsity Football team finished with its finest season at 7-3, the Girls' Tennis team finished as the Northern Region Champion for the first time and placed second in the state of Virginia, while the Girls' Cross Country team captured its first Virginia AAA State Championship in Charlottesville. Individual athletes were also heralded this year as their names appeared in local newspapers and some were offered scholarships like All-American trackster Cathron Birge, footballer Roger Boone, and cross country star Wendy Neely.

With the strength and determination of the 1,500 athletes who competed strongly against all opponents, the Bruins surged ahead in all areas of the spectrum from swimming to baseball.

With blows of the whistles, shots of the starting guns, and the drop kicks of soccer, the 1985-86 sports season proved to be triumphant for both fans and athletes because little things mean a lot in athletics.

Though strength and dedication are major factors in the success of tennis, the ball and racquet prove, it's the little things that are the most important.

During a key district match, Melanie Ford perfects her serve as she does her part in the Bruin victory.

Starting a new tradition

Proving itself as a formidable force in the Northern District, the Varsity Football team turned in consistently strong performances as it went unbeaten in its first five outings. "The 5-0 mark shows the growth of the Bruin program and without a doubt tradition has begun!" remarked Coach Joe Clark. The Bruins went on to finish 7-3 for the season; its best record in Lake Braddock's 13 year history.

Since Clark began his reign as coach of the mighty Bruins five years ago, the football program has improved steadily as was seen this season. This was true not only on the varsity level, but also on the junior varsity and freshman levels as each team experienced one loss.

The Varsity team's offense was led by quarterbacks Jeff Marchiando and Mike Frigault, running backs Chris Coleman and leading rusher Roger Boone, and wide receivers Mike Alexander, Bill Carter, and James Jones as they piled points on the scoreboard and created one of

of the top offenses in the Northern District.

The defensive team, led by seniors Mark Blake, Eric Helm, and Chris Stearns and juniors Rob McFarland and Byron Ogden, scored shut outs and kept most opponents under 15 points a game, allowing the offense to stay ahead.

The 1985 football season was certainly a success to team members, coaches, and fans as the season provided pride for Lake Braddock and its students.

While the Bruin defense is on the field, Coach Clark plans the next offensive drive.

Tim Rascoll (11) holds the ball as Bill Cimono (3) adds more points to the Bruin score.

Andy Spage (77), Mark Blake (75), and Frantz Pago (23) huddle up as the Bruin defense gets ready to line up against their opponent.

Proving the powerful offense Jeff Marchiando (14) completes a pass, for a large gain to continue the Bruin drive.

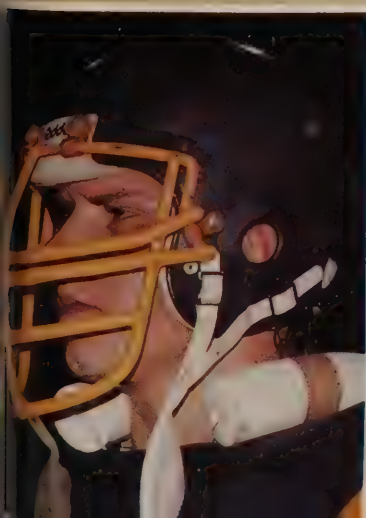

With the offensive line dominating their Jefferson opponent, Roger Boone had no problem finding running room.

Rising to the top

Rolling over their opponents, this year's junior varsity and freshman teams proved once again the power of Lake Braddock sports. Opening the season with victories over Lee; the J.V. team winning 21-7 and the freshman team winning 28-8, the teams' strengths and abilities were apparent early on. With players such as offensive guards Tony Tarlano and Mark Butler, and line backers Matt McFarlane and Lance Carter playing for the junior varsity team and Mike Nader, Danny Guynes, Matt O'Brien, and quarterback Matt Gibson for the freshman team, the Bruin football teams were able to raise their standing among area high schools. But these high standings did not come without a lot of work. J.V. head coach Kevin Kidd commented, "This year's team has exceeded our expectations. They've illustrated how much can be accomplished with hard work and dedication. They give everything they have each game," adding that the latter was the mark of a true winner. And under the guidance of their coaches, Mr. Kidd and Mr. Fraser, they were winners, having two of the best seasons yet.

While protection is given by the offensive line, punter Ken Boyle (5) kicks the ball deep into Oakton territory.

Coming through the breakthrough sign first is Kevin Corry (13) as he leads the fired up junior varsity team onto the field.

After the completion of a perfect play, the freshman offense walks off the field as the referee signals a touchdown.

Running ahead of the rest

This year's cross country team proved to be state contenders not only because of the varsity members, but also because of the junior varsity team which consistently turned in strong performances wherever they travelled. As the wind ruffled their hair and a soft breathing was heard, the Lake Braddock Cross Country team practiced everyday running throughout the Lake Braddock community. Running a minimum of five miles a day, the team proved that they had the dedication and determination to win.

The boys' team consisted of 59 runners and was anchored by senior veterans Mike Anthony, Tim Kane, and Scott Muscarella. Travelling throughout the state of Virginia to prestigious invitational, the Bruins captured

Led by junior transfer Wendy Neely and senior Linda Trew, the Lady Bruins swept through their meets by taking first places in all that they competed including the Athletic Director's Meet, the University of Virginia Invitational, and the Georgetown Prep Invitational.

The Lady Bruins continued their success with an impressive victory for the district title as the girls missed a perfect score of 15 by only one point.

When asked about the cross country season, Coaches Andy Tisinger and Marshall Windsor commented, "The cross country team as a whole proved itself as one of the best programs in Virginia."

At the front of the pack, Mike Anthony runs a strong race to help the Bruins take a respectable 2nd place finish.

At the Palotti Invitational, Scott Muscarella does a hurdler stretch before he begins to run.

With matching Mickey Mouse sweatshirts, Linda Trew and Wendy Neely warm up with a few leg stretches.

Keeping up the pace are Bruins Susan Volpe, Shawnda Wilson, and Kim Marks as they push to pass their South Lakes opponent.

Key boy Bruins, Tim Kane, Vince Hancock, and Brian Kelly quicken the pace to bring the Bruins a 2nd place standing at the Palotti Invitational.

Bruins on the run

Lake Braddock coaches Andy Tisinger and Marshall Windsor are strong believers in the philosophy that if you're going to be among the best you have to compete against the best.

Cross country is a sport which tests not only the physical conditioning of the athlete but his or her mental conditioning as well. Desire is the foundation for this sport.

"This year was quite a disappointment because the team expected to do well. But injuries to key runners slowed us down though overall we, the team, enjoyed ourselves and that's what counts," commented Chris Poore about the cross country season.

"There was a lot of competition and there were tough practices, but we hung in there. This was my first season and I really enjoyed it. The coaches were great and really encouraged us to excel to our limit. I'm looking forward to coming back next year," replied Vicki Rusinak.

Running stride for stride are Jamie McDowell and Heather Matz as the end of the race nears.

Winning with sticks

With eleven returning varsity players, experience was on the side of the Girls' Varsity Field Hockey team. Talent, teamwork, and endurance also played key roles in the team's successful season.

With enthusiasm, the girls started practicing early by attending a one week camp held at James Madison University. The hard-work paid off as skills such as stickwork and defense were perfected.

The team opened their season by defeating Hayfield 3-0, and went on to win four consecutive games before a hard fought 2-1 loss against their toughest competitor, Woodson.

Last year's district scoring leader, Teri O'Shea once again led the offense, with the help of Kathi Nidiffer. On the defensive side captains Marti Bevan and Kristi Nidiffer never seemed to let down. New player Dana Boone performed strongly throughout the season and Chris Rives showed tremendous improvement.

Ending the season Coach Diane Miller commented, "I was very pleased with the girls' performances. The team played with experience and strong skills to make the season successful."

While overpowering her opponents, Chris Rives (9) gains possession of the ball.

Athletic, hardworking, and intuitive were the words Coach Sandy Gray used to describe Girls' Junior Varsity Field Hockey team.

A strong defense was led by returning player and captain Kris Riley, along with newcomers Kim Schmidt and Stephanie Frankiewicz. While the defense was preventing the opposing teams from scoring, the offense powered forward with key players Michelle Malebranche and Robyn Gurinsky. Offensive captain Heather Johnson described the season as challenging and a great experience.

"Hockey is a cool sport, it's a lot of fun, especially when you're on a winning team!" Eva Shafer remarked. There was no disputing her words as they ended their season with an 8-3-1 record, beating out tough competitors Robinson and Woodson.

Anticipating another victory, J.V. players Jennifer Lacheman, Kim Schmidt, and Kira Bazarian watch from the sideline.

Backing the Bruins

With spirited personalities and enthusiasm toward the Bruin teams, fans were faithful through thick and thin. Whether it was football, basketball, field hockey, or any other event, Lake Braddock followers always came through. Bruin team members could always count on enthusiastic crowds for support, especially during Homecoming Week, when fans expressed their dedication to teams with record setting crowds. Not only were students supportive, but parents were as well. Lake Braddock was lucky to have spirited, supportive fans, and crowds always seemed to demonstrate Bruin pride. Freshman Stacey Moore summed it up, "With the determination of the teams and the spirit of the crowds, everyone was a winner!"

Expressing true Bruin pride, Sean Burch, Denny Alexander and Ty Dickson cheer as the Bruins score a touchdown.

Conferring about the upcoming match, Jennifer Brandt, Laura Williamson, and Coach Laraine Mittleman wait for an expected win.

Swinging to victory

Strength was the word describing this year's Girls' Varsity Tennis Team. Under the guidance of head coach Laraine Mittleman, and with top players Jennifer Brandt and Laura Williamson, the team proved to be a strong contender in Northern District Tennis. "We have a very strong team with a lot of depth," Mrs. Mittleman commented, adding that the chance of tying districts with Woodson was also high.

To reach the strength they had the girls worked very hard. Practicing over the summer, many girls improved substantially, and with daily practices throughout the season, were able to perfect their strokes. Jennifer Brandt, the top Bruin player said, "We're working very hard and have the potential and talent to do very well." She also stated that other players such as Lynn Yankosky and Melanie Ford helped to strengthen the team as a whole, helping to create one of the strongest and most optimistic teams ever.

The Lake Braddock Golf team once again proved to be a contender in the tough Northern District this year. Led by seniors Jim Thompson, Mike Rusinak, Tim Carlson, and captain Wyn Elder, as well as sophomore Chris Gomez, the Bruins struggled to a 2-6 record. Though the record was on the poor side, it didn't show the determination and closeness of the matches, of which 3 of the 6 losses were within a five stroke margin. The Bruins made up for their earlier losses as they placed 4th overall at the Northern District Championship.

Seniors Ben Aceron, Jay

DuHadway, Steve Gordon and Gene Jordan, and sophomore Amy Green rounded out the field of 10 as they proved the Bruins depth by consistently shooting well for the team in the key matches.

Competing against a tough district opponent, Mike Rusinak hits a long shot onto the putting green.

Before each game the cheerleaders boosted the players' morale by decorating their lockers and making breakthrough signs. The cheerleaders worked hard at their practices every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Proving that their hard work and dedication paid off, the girls stole the show at the University of Maryland cheerleading camp. They came home with all blue ribbons and four Bruin cheerleaders were nominated for "All American Cheerleaders." The four nominees, Kelly Cavender, Debbie Lind, Monica Mazza and Traci Thoureen proved Lake Braddock cheerleaders have what it takes to be the best.

The cheerleaders worked to promote motivation and devotion to the school. Mrs. Carraway, a new cheerleading sponsor, commented, "I have thoroughly enjoyed working with the cheerleaders this year. Their energy and enthusiasm has given me a personal boost."

“Faster, faster, speed the ripples up, point your toes, and smile.” Those were the familiar words of the varsity Drill Team captains, Pauline Arrilliga, Kelcie Guiberson, and Kim Welsh, and their sponsors Ms. Jenny Clapper, and Mrs. Jean Worthington.

The Drill Team performed their dance routines at every football and basketball game. Their performances included such songs as Jungle Love, Don't Go, The Bird, and many others. The drill team was always a pleasure to watch with its new and exciting routines.

Their hard work did pay off. During the summer the drill team attended a drill team camp at Mary Washington College. They captured all the trophies including the award for Most Admired Drill Team in the state of Virginia. Six of the Lake Braddock girls were nominated for Miss Superstar Drill Team. Out of the six, five received the honor. The girls were Pauline Arrilliga, Kristen Calvert, Dede Davis, Lynda Galbraith, Kelcie Guiberson, and Kim Welsh.

“The girls realized that all the hard work and dedication really does pay off. We had a very rewarding season” stated Drill Team sponsor Mrs. Worthington, when asked about the team's success.

While doing a novelty dance routine to “Chattanooga Chu Chu,” Kelcie Guiberson and Pauline Arrilliga smile with enthusiasm.

Combined talents bring Bruins' success

This year's Swim and Dive team proved again what hard work and dedication could do, along with being able to enjoy the feeling of success. Though many of the Bruin swimmers had other swimming schedules with teams like Solotar, Curl, and AAC, they, too, were able to swim as Bruins and they consistently helped the team as it gained an overwhelming amount of victories. Elin Smith, a Curl swimmer, commented, "I don't think we realized how much we really had until we all came together in the meets."

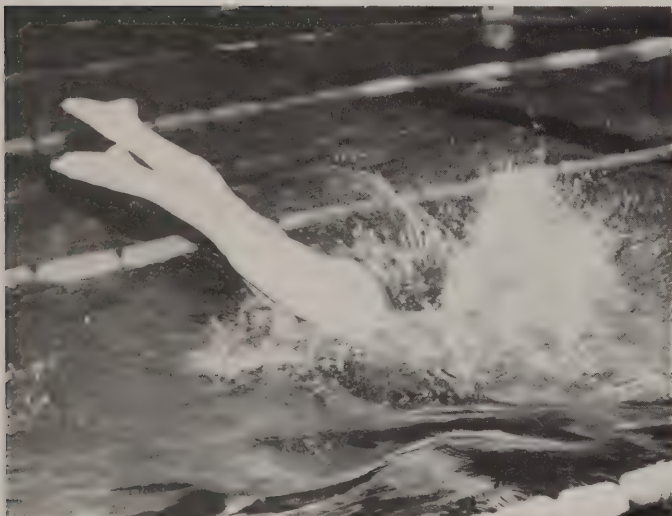

Practicing six days a week, morning and afternoon, many of the swimmers realized that strong dedication was necessary to be on the team. Coach Diane Underwood and Dive Coach Robert Carvagal worked successfully together with their swimmers and divers to create a winning combination.

Of course, the hard work did not come without fringe benefits. "We have great parties," commented Jeff Choate, "but mainly we had a lot of fun swimming and enjoyed it tremendously."

Tumbling to the top

Working as a united team, Lake Braddock was proud to have the Girls Gymnastics Team at the top of its strong sports program. The team, consisting of fifteen girls, practiced everyday after school from 3:30 to 5:30. The efforts paid off as the girls opened their season with a victory over Chantilly, and then went on to win a tough invitational at South Lakes.

After several straight wins head coach Ann Ripley commented, "We have a strong team with a lot of depth that works well together."

Consistent first place performances were turned in by Bethany Sullivan on bars, Shannon Propps on floor, and Nancy McElvain on vault. Throughout the season Lake Braddock Team proved to be the team to beat, as they traveled to Virginia Beach to win the Virginia AAA state title.

Striving for the lowest times, reaching for a higher height, and pushing for extra feet, dominated the minds of athletes on the Boys Indoor Track and Field Team. Led by captains Mike Alexander, Mike Anthony, Andre Nelson, and Dion Wafford, the team proved to be championship material. Working for hours after school to prepare for competitive meets at Episcopal High School and George Mason University, the Boys Indoor Track team captured victories against tough opponents such as Woodson, Robinson, and T.C. Williams.

Coach Marshall Windsor commented, "This was accomplished relying on experience to pull us through another championship season along with Districts, Regionals, and States."

Head Coach Marshall Windsor trained runners while Coach Pete Bendorf and Coach Bob Digby worked with athletes in shot put, long jump, high jump, and pole vault. As the season came to a close the talent of both coaches and athletes was apparent through the team's first ever state championship.

As Tim Kane rounds the corner for his final lap, he shows that all runners must have determination and endurance.

Lake Braddock track members Mike Anthony and Scott Muscarella strive to maintain their lead over the West Springfield Spartans.

in the Old Dominion Invitational and third in the Coaches Relay. Captain Cathron Birge was out most of the indoor season due to a pulled hamstring earlier in the season. However, the Lady Bruins held their own and always exhibited a spectacular performance everytime they stepped onto the track of Episcopal and George Mason University Field houses, where most of the indoor meets were held.

Returning veterans this year included distance runner Linda Trew, and new comers Kim Marks and Wendy Neely. Sprinters included Dana Boone, Adria and April Hicks, and Caroline McCormick who all contributed to the great number of victories.

In the field, the ladies were led by Dana Boone in the long jump; high jumpers Michelle Gorden and Adria Hicks; and shot putter Micki Panetti.

Coach Andy Tisinger commented on the determination and ability his young but successful team had, "It's one of the most talented teams in the state of Virginia. We hope to do well at the District, Regional and State Level."

Finishing the season as district and regional champs, the girls went on to win their 2nd straight Virginia state championship.

Soaring to the top

With only five returning players, this year's Boys' Varsity Basketball team relied on dedication, determination and discipline for their tremendous success. These three key elements proved to be effective as the Bruins played tough against all opponents including Northern District rivals W.T. Woodson, West Springfield, and Robinson.

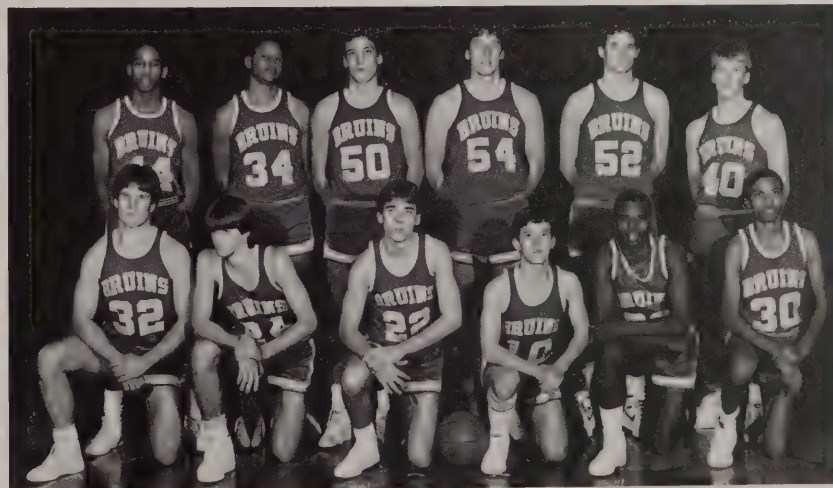

After close fought losses to T.C. Williams 61-60; Lee, 48-45; and in the Jefferson Christmas Tournament championship game, 36-35, to the host Colonials, the Bruins jumped back in the running with amazing agility and a six game winning streak. Led by sophomores Hubert Davis and Jason Coleman, the team showed tremendous poise and effort as they soared to the top of the Northern District. While senior Mike Saale proved to be a key factor in many of the Bruin's close victories, guards Jeff Woodbury and Jay DuHadway controlled the team throughout the season with their decisions on the tempo of the game.

The many hours of practice spent perfecting plays and techniques paid off as, each week, the boys compiled victory after victory. With the Bruins seated at the top of the Northern District along with rival Robinson, excitement filled Lake Braddock as the two teams met in the season finale with the Bruins prevailing. The boys also went on to capture the district title outright by defeating Robinson once again in the Northern District Tournament.

Moving to the top

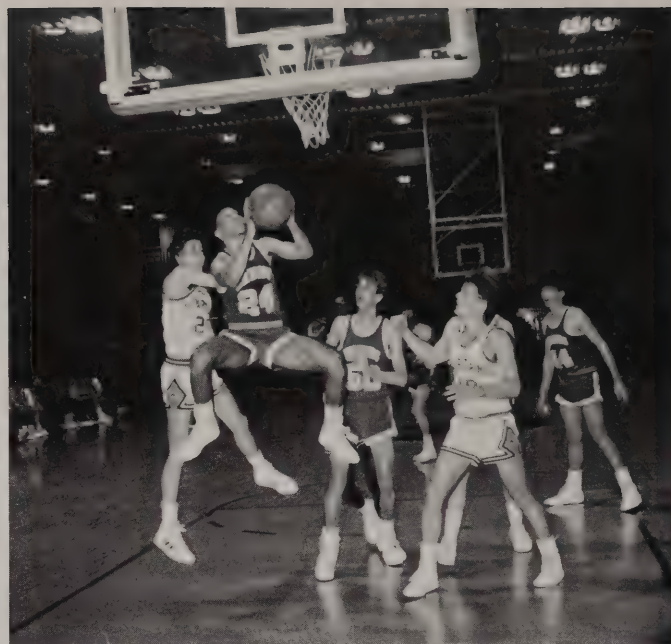

Moving up from freshman basketball, the Boys' Junior Varsity Basketball team proved they could handle the challenge. Hard work during after school practices gave the team the backbone to their success. Coach Matt Halverson commented, "This was a hard working bunch of players; a good group of young men that learned how to play the game right. Good defense was the key element in the success of this year's team."

Remarkable and commendable players Alex Rockymore, Matt Brown, Jay Bunnell, Marcus Crockett, and Mike Rutherford started and held the team together with their great poise and talent. Foul shooting averaged 80% from these key players and the team averaged 75% as a whole.

A new strategic move for the Bruins this year came from the full court press, where each player marks an offensive opponent im-mediatly following the opponent's defensive rebound. This proved to be another key factor in the remarkable record of the team along with the fact that the team averaged 70 points per game offensively and allowed an average of only 55 points due to the strong defense.

Spartan defenders look on helplessly as Marcus Crockett (20) shoots the ball in his approach to the hoop.

Overpowering his opponent, Matthew Brown (44) contributes to the Bruins' victory.

While off the court, J.V. players show support to Bruin teammates as their lead grows to eight points.

Preparing for a foul shot, Daryl Phillips (22) concentrates on the basket.

The drive to excel

The high expectations for this year's Freshman Basketball team may not have been achieved, but the drive to excel was there and as a whole the team's attitude was high. Guard Peter Grace commented, "If we work hard and pull together as a team in the future, our team's talent will show."

The Bruins were led on the court by guard Darrius Fenton, center Ray Tate, forward Clayton Thompson, guard David Bell, and center David Holland. Other outstanding players who came off the bench and contributed to the team were forward Chris Rogers, forward Neil Gallagher, guard Chad Haley, forward Jeff Steele, guard Jeff Harkins, and center Brian Wyrick, who came off an early season injury.

Coach Karl Studt noted that, "These players have to make individual victories by paying the price it takes to be good and not expect to beat everybody by just showing up. This year's record showed that you have to work hard to be good in the Northern District. I try to incorporate in a player academic, social, and physical growth to create an emotionally strong person that can move on life."

Younger proved to be better

The Girls' Varsity Basketball team was young but strong. Consisting of seven juniors, three sophomores, and two freshmen, and with Kathi Nidiffer as their captain, the Lady Bruins ranked 15th in the Washington metropolitan area in January.

By practicing every day in the gym from 6:00 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. the team maintained top form in order to play in games every Tuesday and Friday. "I had a lot of fun this season, mainly because we have been so successful and we all get along well. We worked very hard during practices, which paid off in our games," commented sophomore veteran Tara Mogan.

Having no seniors on the team didn't prevent the Lady Bruins from having one of the best seasons in the history of girls' basketball. With leading scorer freshman Laura Teter and junior veterans Kathi Nidiffer and Gretchen Bageant, the girls were successful in beating their rivals T.C. Williams and Robinson.

Coach Melissa Trowbridge commented on the season. "The team responded very well to the new coaching system and showed tremendous poise considering they are such a young team. The starting line up regularly contained two freshmen, one sophomore and two juniors. They worked together to bring respect to the Lake Braddock Girls' Basketball program."

Leading scorer, freshman Laura Teter (30), goes up for a jump shot as her West Springfield opponents try and block her view.

The Girls' J.V. Basketball team started out the season with great success with wins over T.C. Williams, West Springfield, and many other tough competitors. With such wins the team proved to be headed for a victorious season.

The team was hard at work practicing every day after school preparing for difficult games. "We worked together as a team, no matter if we were on the bench cheering or playing in the game," commented Kristy Hook when asked about the success of the Girls' Junior Varsity Basketball team.

Beginning the season with a new coach, Mrs. Annette Wiseman, the girls had another rewarding season. They established themselves as one of the best J.V. teams in the state of Virginia, led by team captains Janelle

Hancock, Holly Ross, and Kerri Willey.

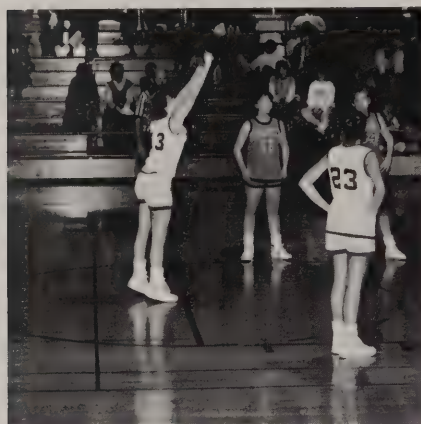

"The girls learned that team effort and support is what makes a winning team. I enjoyed working with the girls because of their constant enthusiasm and the team's success made it even more enjoyable," reflected Coach Wiseman when asked about the team.

While using her knowledge of the game in tight situations, Kelley Harlow decides her next move.

Taking Them Down

With most of the team returning from last year, the 1985-86 Varsity Wrestling team's season looked to be one of the best yet! Intensity was high as the Bruins practiced for matches and competed against opponents.

Varsity wrestler David Spage (185) commented, "This year a large group of experienced and dedicated seniors were the key to the success of the team." Leading the Bruins was captain Eric Helm who wrestled in the 155 lb. weight class. Outstanding seniors Mark Blake (unlimited), Todd Blake (167), John Brennan (145), and Dave Roberts (119) also contributed to the driving force behind the wrestling team's success.

Lake Braddock wrestlers are known for their strength, power, skill, and dedication. This year was no exception. Both the J.V. and freshman wrestling teams defeated many of their strongest opponents due to the long hours of practice. Every day after school, often until 7:00 p.m., the wrestlers worked hard on their moves and techniques, hoping that when the time came for a match, all the work and time spent would pay off.

Coach Alan Thompson proved to be a strong and vital part of this year's wrestling teams. He was able to guide the new wrestlers on the freshman team, while continuing to help the J.V. team on their way to the varsity level.

Mike Parsons, Nick Aldas, Pat Kiely, and Daniel Rhee, four of the top Bruin wrestlers on the freshman and J.V. teams, provided enthusiasm for both teams as they each had impressive individual records. The overall standings showed the great team effort as the freshman team went 8-0, while the J.V. team finished 5-3.

Students in training

Qualifications: good grades, discipline, dedication, and a desire to help others by learning about the human body — its strengths and weaknesses. That is what it takes to be a trainer and that was what this year's athletic trainers had. Calling them "excellent and dedicated," sponsor, John Langrehr, also added that they could use a lot more. "It's a good program; I enjoy it. It takes a lot of work and dedication to learn about what you're doing," commented student trainer Mike Pettit.

Spending the year learning about nutrition, physical therapy, medicine, orthopedics, and anatomy in their athletic training class, the student trainers put this knowledge to work at every Lake Braddock sporting event whether it was gymnastics or football; sometimes spending as much as 20 hours a week helping athletes. And even when there wasn't an event coming up, the trainers acted as monitors, helping to rehabilitate injured persons and make them aware of proper stretching, nutrition, and conditioning programs.

"It's not easy," said Mr. Langrehr, "but they get out of it what they put into it with the satisfaction of knowing that they are helping others to feel and perform better."

During an after school practice, David Foglesong and Scott Muscarella quicken the pace while doing striders.

Springing into spring track

Opening up another season of spring track, veterans and newcomers alike came out to support the sport of track and capture another outdoor title.

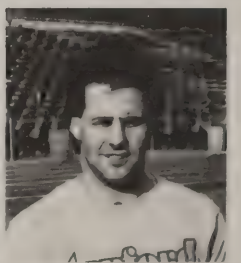

Outdoor track is a sport for those who enjoy running, throwing shot and discus, jumping, or pole vaulting. Although the team was predominately young, there were many returning veterans who were seniors participating in their last season of track. This included distance runners, Linda Trew, Mike Anthony, David Foglesong, Tim Kane, and Scott Muscarella as well as sprinters, Cathron Birge, Mike Alexander, Chris Coleman, Andre Nelson and Dion Wafford, and shot putter, Micki Panetti.

Commenting on the season and on the teams overall performance, Coach Marshall Windsor said, "This season our goal was to improve individual times and field abilities. We concentrated on skill and form throughout the year."

With a look of determination, long jumper Adria Hicks gains height from the spring board during afternoon practice.

Up on the track doing striders, Vince Shrigley demonstrates that pole vaulters also need to keep themselves in shape.

Executing perfect form, high jumper Tondra Bray clears the bar with skill and grace.

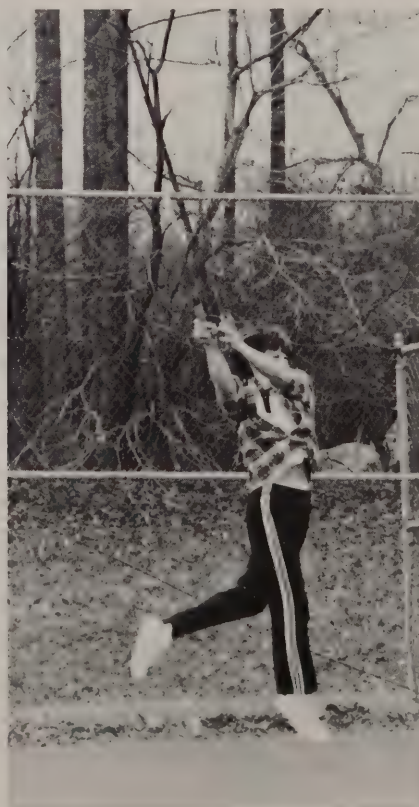

Senior letterman Joe Maranto demonstrates high intensity while hitting a powerful forehand at an after school practice.

As the season of spring sports began, Boys' Tennis once again returned to the courts with more than 40 boys rallying for the 16 spots on the team. Once the team was selected, every player began to work hard and achieve their goal of regional play.

Returning lettermen consisted of Joey Maranto, Andy Jaffee, Cam Anderson, Jason Kohl, and Joey Clement who led the team as Tony Jackson, Scott Harn, and John Cunningham also proved to be strong supports. Newcomer Bobby Murphy provided exceptional contributions to the team match after match.

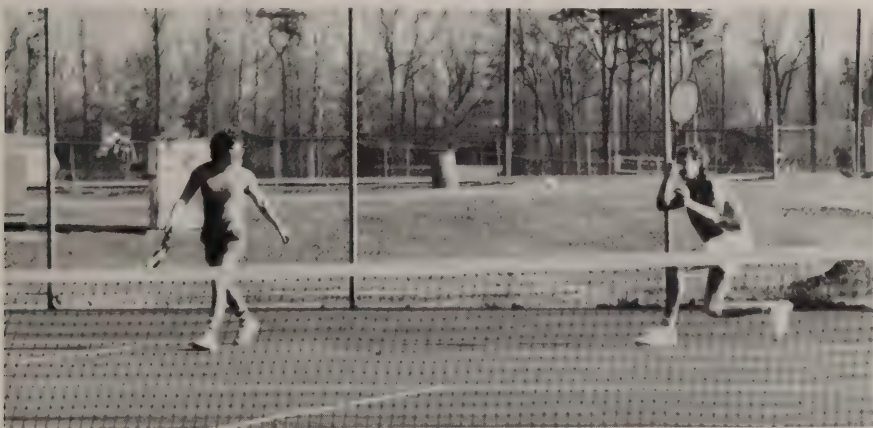

Throughout the season a total of 12 team matches were played. Each team match included 6 single and 3 doubles' matches. Lake Braddock's most challenging competition included West Springfield, and W.T. Woodson in the Northern District, and Langley and West Potomac in regional matches.

The season ended with satisfaction and a feeling of accomplishment as reflected by Coach Dick Lisi's comment at the beginning of the season, "The '86 team has the potential to be our best ever. A lot will depend upon their dedication and how well our doubles teams come together."

Jason Kohl looks to his doubles partner Cam Anderson as he reaches for the scoring shot.

Possessing balance is a key factor to being a good gymnast as shown by Captain David Jones on the high bar.

Determination and the strive for perfection induced this year's Boys' Gymnastic team to achieve a limit beyond their goal. With an onset of new members, the team proved that they were at their largest and strongest ever. Returning senior Andrew Russell commented, "We had a whole mess of new guys, we worked real well together as a team and we counted on each other as a family. Plus, the new guys showed a lot more promise than others have in the past years." First year Coach Mike Cooper headed the Bruins as well as their Northern Region rival, Hayfield. Both teams worked together as they proved their dedication through the long, vigorous hours of practice every-day after school. First year gymnast Shawn Little stated, "I've learned a lot from the older members of the team. It seemed like they really wanted to help me when I first came in. Eventually I've been able to achieve my goal through all the help I've received." Evidently, all the hard work paid off as the Bruins ended their season victoriously against the majority of their opposition. Yet with all of the team's triumphs, the members realized that there was still much room for improvement. Third year gymnast Mike Castillo explained, "Competing in gymnastics over the years has enabled me to see the team change and improve greatly. It was a lot better this year because we concentrated on improving our ability to perform. I'm glad this year was a highlight not only for the new team members, but also the old." With this belief, the team was able to reach the high goal they had set. And in the end, they proved it to everyone that they were in fact, a team to be reckoned with.

Mike Mills displays strength and flexibility as he perfects his scissor kick on the pommel-horse.

It's not just another sport

Dribbling, passing, and throwing were just a few of the skills necessary to being a varsity soccer player, and just a few of the skills this year's hopefuls were evaluated on during the try-outs.

Led by such players as Tracey Kennedy, Michelle Kime, and Emily Rice, all of whom were returning All-District members for the girls, and the brothers Mark and Matt Wayland along with Steve Szczypinski on the boys side, Lake Braddock combined the old with the new making well rounded teams in offense and defense. Boys' coach, Jack Cicala, commented, "We have twenty boys, all of whom have been playing soccer since they were young. They will give us the solid depth in both the offense and the defense that is needed to be the state champs."

Each team combined all of their soccer skills into a team which put out every effort to eliminate the other teams in their games, as they gave their best shot at the race for the state championships.

Practicing a new offensive drive is Robyn Gurinsky.

Alive and kicking

As the snow began to melt and the days got warmer, the excitement of spring sports was alive and kicking once again. In order to grab a spot on the Junior Varsity Soccer teams, athletes were required to demonstrate strength and determination during the demanding try-outs. Both Coach Rick Rice and Coach Sue Vodick placed strong emphasis on endurance, aggressiveness and competitiveness as well as enthusiasm for the game. In addition to the vigorous conditioning, the coaches introduced new offensive scoring drives, strong defensive plays, and pushed their athletes to achieve excellence.

Teams to beat included Northern District rivals Robinson and West Springfield as the Bruins played their best to be the number one team once again.

Play ball!

“We’re shooting to be the district champion baseball team. We have the talent and experience to do it!”

Coach Dan Griel encouraged and challenged the varsity baseball team to reach this goal during the 1986 season.

Led by captain, David Latour and Mike Frigault and returning lettermen Bill Carter, Shawn Hagerty, David Thomas, and Stu Whitten, the team practiced intensely after school every day from 3:30 until dark.

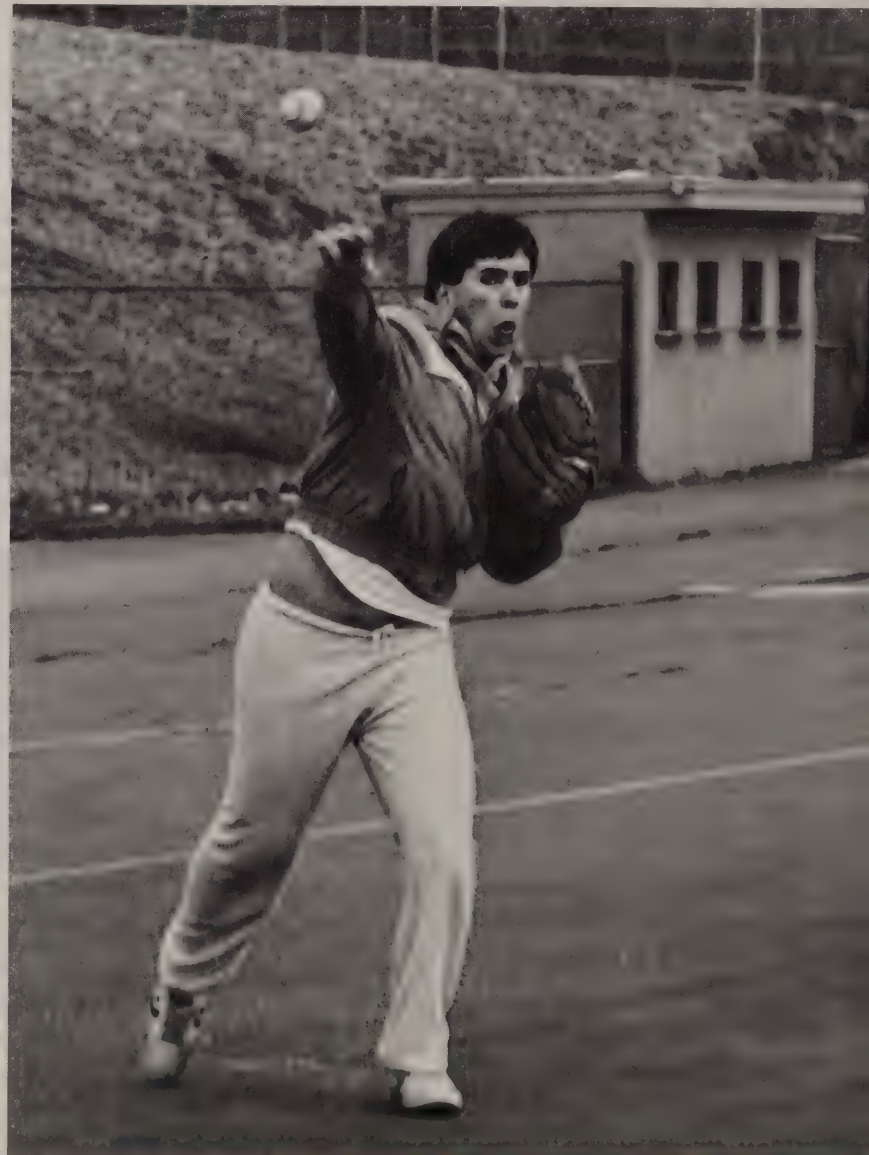

The practice paid off as the team played exciting games in front of crowds of up to 100 enthusiastic Bruin fans. The Bruin baseball team aggressively took on their competition during the course of the 18 game season. Senior Jim Cudahy commented, “I enjoy being involved in the program for the competitive atmosphere and the sheer enjoyment of the game.”

Using his baseball skills, Shawn Stofko throws the ball to first base.

With speed and agility, Joe Ball throws the ball to his teammate.

As spring approached, the junior varsity and freshman baseball teams formed and started their rigorous training in hopes of their most successful season ever.

Coached by J.V. coach Bill Clendaniel and freshman coach Ralf DiBari, the boys practiced up to three hours every day after school. Clendaniel and DiBari pushed the team to perfection through demanding drills in batting, infield plays, outfield plays, bunting, and base running. With hours of extensive practice behind them, the J.V. boys eagerly looked forward to their competitive eighteen game season, and the freshmen to their sixteen game season. Throughout the season, it was apparent that the boys pulled together as two dedicated, vigorous teams.

Freshman Jason McClellan expressed his enthusiasm towards being a member of the freshman baseball team saying, "I really like playing baseball because it is a lot of fun and an exciting sport. I also think the freshman baseball team will do really well this year!"

Picking a winner from the best

Approximately one-hundred girls had hopes of obtaining a position on the 1986 J.V. and Varsity Softball teams. Coach Sandy Gray and Coach Melissa Trowbridge had a tough decision because of all the talent presented. The departure of a great coach, Ms. Kay Norton, left Mr. Bob Carson to choose a new one. Mrs. Sandy Gray, a Bruin softball alumni, had the best credentials. She had the qualities of a great coach. Key defense players that molded the varsity team were returning lettermen Monica Price and Kerry Willey and newcomers Nadine Robinson and Lori Boyd. Opponents were unable to score many points because of the stamina and endurance that the defensive athletes presented. Coach Gray said with a smile that there are a great bunch of hitters at the varsity level which could be an important asset to the scoreboard. Both teams were young with the majority being freshmen and sophomores which added up to two strong teams. When asked before the season how she felt about her talented teams, Coach Gray responded, "It will be a young team especially with seven freshmen and sophomores at the varsity level. We should be pretty good and have a chance at districts and possibly regionals. It will be tough because of the well-rounded amount of talent in this district."

Being careful not to advance to home while third baseman Angela Ellis has the ball is Camille Salge.

Success won the Bruin way

For the thirteenth straight year the Lake Braddock sports program provided excitement to the school and its community. With a record breaking amount of awards ranging from the football team's sportsmanship award to the four state team titles, Lake Braddock saluted its athletes with a special assembly on March 6, 1986. One memorable weekend in February provided the Bruins with one Northern District Championship and three Virginia AAA State Championships, a Virginia High School League record.

Along with the team titles came many great individual performances including All-Americans Cathron Birge, Craig Ammon, and Dana Boone. Also showing great talent were Roger Boone, who was featured in The Virginia Weekly section of the Washington Post, and Emily Rice, an athlete of three different varsity sports.

Week after week, the Lake Braddock student body packed into stands across the county to cheer Bruin classmates to victory, be it in football, basketball, track, swimming, or soccer. Thanks to the strong and determined efforts of Bruin athletes, Lake Braddock sports were filled with many memories and victories.

Little things mean a lot . . .

ORGANIZATIONS

With over 65 organizations ranging from Photography and Design Company to the Young Democrats, afterschool activities took up to a weekly average of two and a half hours per student. "It's important to have so many groups because it's a good way to get involved in our school and develop new interests at the same time," said Brooke Wortham, an active member of the Interact Club. Interact was designed to help students and faculty participate in such a big school. Interestingly, this big club worked on a small scale. The members formed task forces, composed of only three to four people each, to improve school areas like student/teacher relationships and school/community situations. These task forces were examples of the little units in Lake Braddock's multitude of organizations. Smaller structures like these are the building blocks that made clubs such a big part of our school.

Each organization had its own variations of these "little things." This club support may have been the FHA member who baked cookies to serve the teachers after school, or the Chrysalis staff that stayed up all night typing to meet a deadline. A group couldn't function without its officers to take attendance, organize funds, and plan trips. No one could forget the helpful members of the Korean or German Clubs who spent the fall festival selling delicacies like spring rolls and bratwurst.

All these "little things" are what clubs were about. Students and sponsors alike worked together to accomplish common goals. People cared enough to catch the little details in hopes to make everything work. Groups of individuals got together in the pursuit of interests, hobbies, and just plain fun.

The "little things," the different people and personalities, built the organizations that saw Lake Braddock through another exciting year.

Cooperating to improve L.B.

Many people at the beginning of the year did not know much about the Interact Club. Those who did, knew that this past year was their second successful year in existence at Lake Braddock. The club, which sometimes worked with the S.G.A. and was sponsored by the Burke Rotary Club, worked toward making our school a better place and helping the community. Interact was divided into task forces which concentrated on certain areas of the school, such as appearance, teacher-student relations, intermediates, and student problems. The club included both boys and girls from grades 8-12. Also, the students represented the student body as a whole. These students were of all types, who participated in other various activities and academics.

Interact started the year by attending Camp Letts for three days. It was at camp that they assessed our school and broke down into task forces.

Stefan Russell, a member of the club, commented, "Interact has been fun and rewarding in that you feel you've contributed to the school and its people."

Saving lives

The two cars were there, smashed among the shattered glass. The bloody victims of the crash were rushed to the waiting ambulances while sirens wailed and firetrucks arrived. Uniformed policemen shook their heads as they filed reports. It didn't have to happen.

This was the scene that awaited students just reaching Lake Braddock one spring morning. It was a message from SADD; an important lesson — don't drink and drive!

The realistic and shocking mock accident was only one of the many activities SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving) has done to warn teens of the dangers of driving drunk. Members also put on an award winning play at Fall Follies showing how drunk driving affects everyone, and set up a seat belt convincer at the Fall Festival for anyone to try that proved just how invaluable seat belts are.

The best aspect of SADD? Said President Kathy VanWey, "It's the way that everybody's willing to devote their time to help others, that they care."

Another Lake Braddock club dealing with safety was the Safety Council, which promoted safety not only in driving but in all aspects of life. Their duty was to educate the school and the community, and in doing so, had a good time.

The members performed a Halloween safety skit for students at White Oaks and Kings Park elementary schools. They also sponsored teen rides with police officers that gave participants a better understanding of laws and violations, and there was a dance at the police station which all the safety councils in Fairfax County attended.

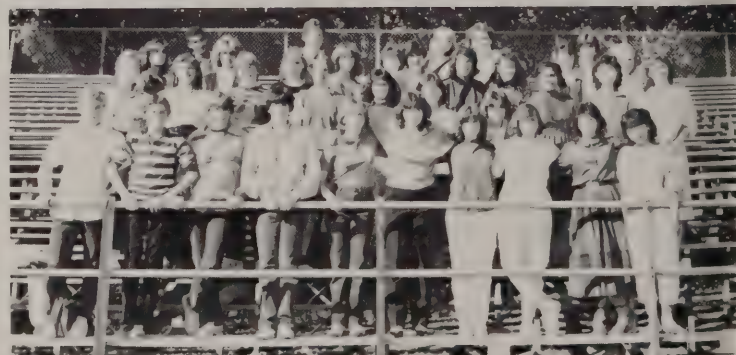

Both SADD and Safety Council encouraged having fun, in a safe way.

Vice President Sarah Agan proudly announces that, because of the tremendous turnout for the recent SADD sponsored dance at the Copa night club, there will be a similar follow up dance this coming Saturday.

Holding out for a hero

Ever wonder what was being cooked in the Home Economics Department when you were craving food before fourth period? As it turns out, H.E.R.O. (Home Economics Related Occupations) and F.H.A. (Future Homemakers of America) were the two organizations responsible for the mouth watering aromas surrounding the area. The two courses allowed students interested in home economics, child development, and restaurant trades to learn and excel in these specialties.

H.E.R.O. gave students in-school time to learn and experience the wonders of gourmet foods. Pupils created exotic dishes and other delicacies like quiche souffles. Sponsor Mrs. Carolyn Ray said, "It's a great course for students to take. They learn a lot and make use of it years after high school."

Not only did H.E.R.O. allow students to enjoy themselves, but it also gave pleasure to others. Members of this organization prepared a luncheon for teachers every Wednesday during each lunch shift.

F.H.A. also proved to be great. Students were able to interact with other pupils having the same interests. As one of their many activities, F.H.A. visited the Leewood Nursing Home on Halloween. Sponsor Mrs. Louis Odom commented, "Members brought forth another ray of sunshine to senior citizens as they showed how much they cared for others."

Getting ready for the holidays and entertaining the faculty also kept FHA personalities occupied. Toward the end of the year, a special banquet was held. It was a time used to pay tribute to a job well done by the F.H.A. officers that year. Still, the club continued to flourish as they prepared for activities as the remains of the year went by.

For F.H.A. and H.E.R.O. members, both clubs proved to be a worthwhile and fun experience; one which gave them a chance not only to learn but also to grow.

Business bound

“What a great outfit!” “That one’s definitely my favorite!” These are some of the things you might have heard at the fashion show put together by D.E.C.A. (Distributive Education Clubs of America). It featured high school students as models along with the Homecoming court. The show was held October 4 during all lunch periods.

Besides teaching fashion merchandising, an optional class designed to prepare for careers in the fashion industry, D.E.C.A. also helped students develop leadership skills for marketing and management careers. Using the money raised from the Gift Box and a Fall Festival booth, D.E.C.A.’s fashion merchandising students took a trip to the garment district in New York City. “Marketing is a very dynamic field,” said Mrs. Doris Rees, one of the sponsors of D.E.C.A.

Another club at LBSS intent on helping students increase their knowledge of the business world was F.B.L.A. (Future Business Leaders of America). F.B.L.A. sponsored a canned food drive and sold keychains, and they also held leadership workshops at NOVA and in Roanoke.

A third club preparing students for the future was V.I.C.A. (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America). They sold shelves and carpet for students’ lockers, while at the same time learning carpentry skills on a day to day basis.

Using the money, they held field trips to V.I.C.A.’s National Headquarters in Leesburg and Baltimore’s General Motors Assembly Plant, entered skill activities at district and state levels, participated in job interviews, current events, and spelling contests.

D.E.C.A., F.B.L.A., and V.I.C.A. all offered students hands on experience preparing for the business world. Commented Mr. Walt Chernenko, sponsor, “V.I.C.A. is a good organization for kids. We teach them leadership and social manners.”

Speaking out to win

Dramatic interpretation, prose or poetry reading, impromptu speaking — these are only four of the nine categories Forensics members competed in during the year. The monthly tournaments hosted by local schools such as Stuart, T. C. Williams, and West Springfield, were open to all interested students in grades nine through twelve whose presentations were approved by Mrs. Jane Powell, the Forensics sponsor.

Our Forensics team started the year off successfully, winning four trophies at the October meet alone; a first place for Debbie Rosenfield in Declamation, second place for Katie Moye and Andy Knighton in Dramatic Duo, and third for Katie Moye in Prose Reading. to again win first place at both the Regional and District Tournaments, as they did last year.

Forensics required patience and practice, but gave members a chance to improve their dramatic skills. At workshops such as the one at George Mason University in September, students had a chance to see college level competitors demonstrate their skills. Also, new members experienced a tournament for the first time.

There were many rewards to Forensics, such as winning trophies at the tournaments, and lettering, which took placing in at least five events in a year. As Mrs. Powell put it, "It really takes a lot of work, but it's fun, and it's worth it!"

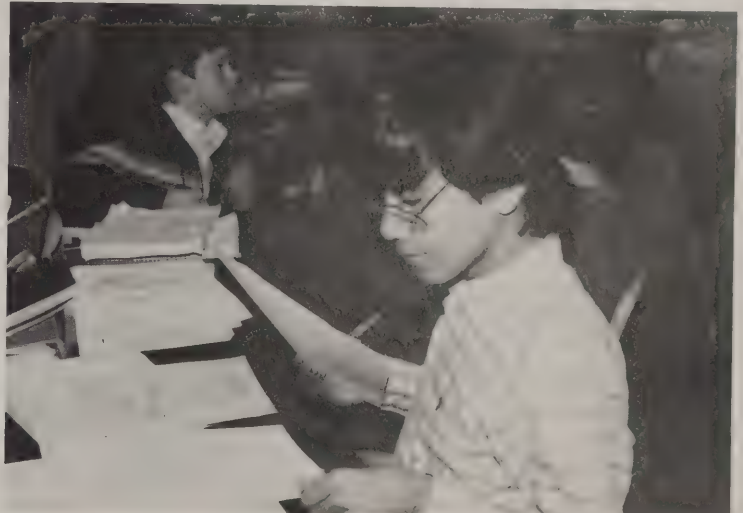

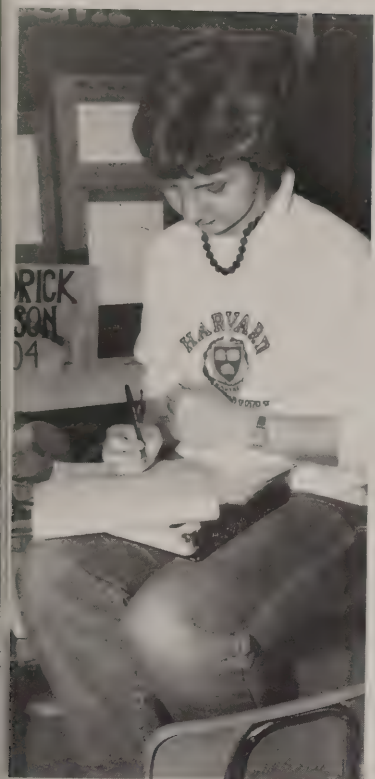

The Lake Braddock Debate Team remained one of the best in the United States this year. By early November they had already won a tournament at the University of Michigan, and several quarter final trophies, including those won at the Bronx High School of Science and Technology, and at Lake Forest in Alabama. The team remained ranked in the top ten nationally after being number one the previous two years. They continued to be a source of pride for Lake Braddock.

To belong to the debate team required a genuine interest in current events and a dedication to research. For the first time ever, a workshop was held at Lake Braddock to teach new debaters the needed skills in communication, organization and collecting information. Throughout the year the more advanced debate members gave the younger, unexperienced ones tips on debate which created a necessary feeling of unity. As expressed by sponsor Mrs. Vicki Drinnon, "The cooperation and dedication of the students helped to maintain our success as a team both locally and on the national level."

With their last tournament in March, the Debate Team wrapped up an extremely successful year, with hopes of an even better one in the year to come.

Building a political future

Students who wanted to become involved in politics were encouraged to join one of the three political clubs offered at Lake Braddock. Model United Nations, Young Democrats, and Young Republicans, were clubs which provided students an opportunity to gain research skills along with being informed about current world events.

Although the Young Republicans and the Young Democrats represented two opposing parties, they were both clubs that worked towards getting students involved with politics.

Guest speaker Vivian Watts addresses interested club members.

Celeste Hebert raises her hand to participate in a mock conference as Kim Riley observes.

The Young Republican club was led by President Rich Hanson, Vice President Viresh Prashar, Secretary Debbie Olitsky, Treasurer Matt Brown, and Chairman Mike Maxwell. This was the first year that the club wrote their own constitution and charter. Hanson commented, "The constitution will be the foundation that will set precedents for the continuation of this club." The Young Republicans also took a trip to Capitol Hill, where they sat in on Congress.

The Young Democrats followed this year's election in the newspaper and participated by doing volunteer work at the polls and doing literature drops. This club was led by President Laura Bishop, Vice-President Mark Brazeal, Secretary Aaron Crippen, and Public Relations Mark Brown.

The purpose of Model U.N. was to promote student understanding on international affairs and the United Nations through participation in conferences, such as the Fairfax Area Model U.N. Conference and the North American Invitational Model U.N. in Washington D.C.

Mrs. Sherry Reynolds, club sponsor, said, "In a nuclear age, negotiating skills and international awareness holds renewed importance. We think our club will help interest grow in an area very important to the future of a world at peace."

Holding on to heritage

Adding a new dimension to the year, the Afro-American and Korean Clubs strengthened their awareness of their cultures and heritages.

Among the activities the Afro-American Club took part in were the Barbeque Chicken Booth at the Fall Festival, and the Variety Show. The money from these events went to pay for a trip to D.C. during Black History Month. The trip included visiting the home of Frederick Douglass, seeing the world famous Harlem

After a Keyette party at the Kolata's house, Karla Spagnola and Karen Helmuth sleep in late.

Cooperation is the key

"Blood drive spot number two," droned a voice over the loudspeaker. "We really do need your blood." Another character whined, "You mean that if I go down to the Keyette blood drive and let them stick needles in my arm, you won't beat me up? O.K., I better hurry down there." After a pause the first voice came on again, "Don't be a wimp. Give blood now."

With announcements like this, it was hard to ignore the work the Key and Keyette Clubs accomplished. Long before the fall blood drive, the Keyettes were busy at work. During the summer they helped out with the Children's Festival at Wolf Trap. Meanwhile, the ninth and tenth grade girls and boys in the Key Club were planning their clean up of the community lake which had become littered.

These efforts continued throughout the year. In the community, residents of the Fairfax Nursing Home especially gained from the club's work. Students went to the nursing home to chat and enjoy the company of the older people. At Christmas, Key Club members held a canned food drive to help the needy.

For Homecoming, Keyettes had a chance to "clown" around as they marched the parade route in baggy pants and funny hats. Late in November, the Keyette Club got together for a potluck supper at Christine and Joanne Kolata's home. Meanwhile, the Key Club roughed it on a camping trip.

With large membership and well organized programs, these clubs displayed their worth to both school and community. As Jennifer Rawlins, put it, "Being in the Key Club is fun because I get to work for the community and have fun with friends at the same time."

Serving with style

Providing the school with an added flair, the Host and Hostess and Tri-Hi-Y Clubs helped benefit the Lake Braddock community.

The Host and Hostess Club was an organization that reached out and helped through worthwhile activities.

During Back-to-School Night, on Sept. 31, the club directed parents through the halls. While graduation ceremonies were about to begin, Host and Hostess Club members showed guests to their seats and passed out programs.

Along with other school organizations, the Host and Hostess Club made the clean-up of Lake Braddock Drive their major project for the 85-86 school year.

Another club committed to responsibility was Tri-Hi-Y. During the fall football season, club members took part in the hectic clean-up of the stadium. To help the school, waking up early on Saturday mornings and heading for the stadium became routine. Adding to their many activities were bake sales and car washes. Those in the club found their work challenging and enjoyable.

As the club introduced new members in late November, Tri-Hi-Y grew in size while earning a respectful reputation due to its cooperation with the school and community.

Making math memorable

Calculating a strong student interest in math this year, the school provided various math clubs for the student body. They consisted of the Intermediate Math Team for seventh and eighth graders, the Junior Math League for students in Algebra II or lower, and the Math Team for more advanced math students. These groups participated in county and state math meets, enabling the students to see how well they stood against other students in the county and state.

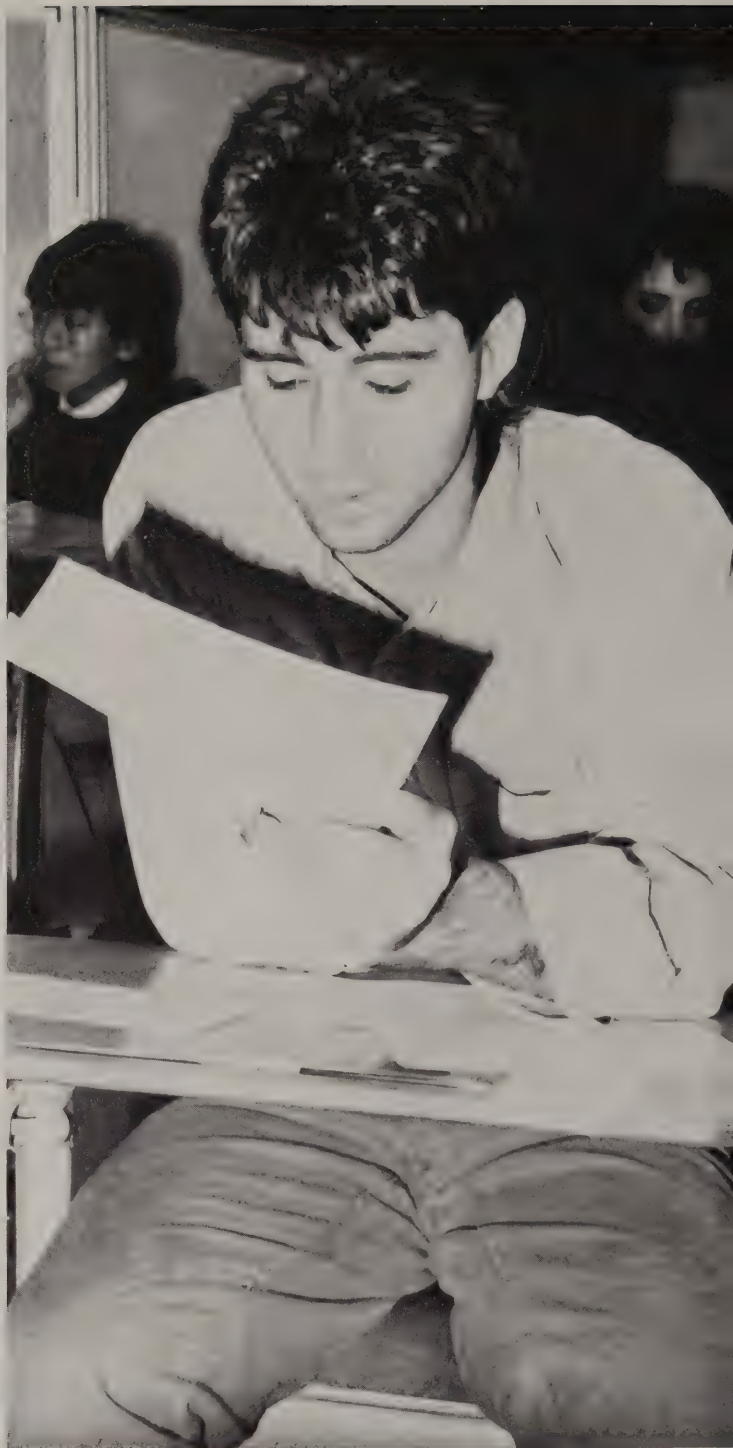

Lake Braddock's Math Team earned statewide recognition as they placed in the top three schools in the county and state at the Fairfax County Competition held at the end of the year. The students' brainpower was rewarded with certificates of merit and school letters.

The most outstanding math students were honored by being accepted into the Math Honor Society. Qualifications consisted of a 3.5 average in math, a 3.0 average in all classes and a research paper on a related math topic. The society helped the school by providing tutoring for students having difficulty in math. They also were required to attend meetings and several math meets held throughout the year. Secretary Beth Nolen wrapped it all up by commenting, "M.H.S. is very rewarding because you get to meet a lot of new people and because you also help others learn."

At the first math meet of the year, team member Greg Harders checks his completed math problems before tackling the tougher brain twisters.

Tasting new lifestyles

“You couldn't pay me to eat that!” might have been the average reply to an offer of escargot and paté, or potato soup and bratwurst. However, these gastronomical feats were happily achieved by hungry French and German Club members. “Trying the different foods offered by a country you're studying is fun, and sometimes delicious way of understanding their culture,” said German Honor Society member Chris McKay.

The German students were successfully active in other areas as well. The club performed a skit to support the Fall Follies called “Goldilocks,” also commemorating the hundredth birthday of the Brothers Grimm. Chi Leng, one of the three bears, said “It was really fun. I hope we do it again next year, too!”

Not forgetting academics, the German Honor Society also made themselves available every Thursday to tutor anyone who needed help.

Also offering weekly tutoring sessions, the French Honor Society members helped students find difficulties in their language. “It's nice to be able to get help from someone who understands the problems you may be facing,” commented French Club member Kim Fender.

Another similarity between the two organizations was that they both found food an interesting way to study their culture. Doing a bit of culinary research, the French Club and Honor Society students enjoyed a French log cake in December. Also for Christmas, they sold advent calendars that had a chocolate surprise behind every door. The money raised was used to support their trips to Washington D.C. in the spring, and while in D.C., they not only enjoyed a meal at a French restaurant, but they took in a few French films as well. Money not spent on these field trips was saved to help out students who were traveling to Paris in the spring.

Both societies, French and German, achieved quite a lot this year. Learning through foods and other activities, these students used their spare time to pursue cultural enrichment.

Capturing culture

The Spanish Honor Society consisted of those students enrolled in Spanish 2 or above and who maintained a "B" average in the class. Members provided a valuable service as tutors to those who needed help in Spanish. Along with tutoring, the Spanish Honor Society held bake sales in the main hall, before and after school. As a means of celebrating their hard-earned achievements, members went to Chi-Chi's and Casa Maria's for Mexican food.

Spanish club members were those students who were interested in the Spanish culture and language but didn't need to be enrolled in Spanish. They held after school fiestas and broadened their views of the Spanish language and customs.

The Latin Honor Society and Club enjoyed many well worth Latin oriented experiences.

Some of the social activities that members partook in were the Roman Saturnalia Banquet, Roman Halloween Party, National Latin Exam, and the Virginia Junior Classical League Annual Convention. Bake sales along with three dollar dues served as money raising projects, which funded the Latin Convention, Latin Bowl, and social outings such as club picnics and pizza parties.

Fortunate Latin students were able to travel to Italy during the spring. The activities the Latin Club and Honor Society held encouraged members to foster a cooperative spirit and develop a keener sense of responsibility towards their teachers and classmates.

Growing and expanding

For some clubs it takes a while to get prepared and organized. The Inter Club Council and the It's Academic team spent a good part of the year achieving this goal. This year was memorable for both of these clubs for various reasons. The Interclub Council was chartered, while at the same time, the It's Academic team was working harder and growing stronger than ever.

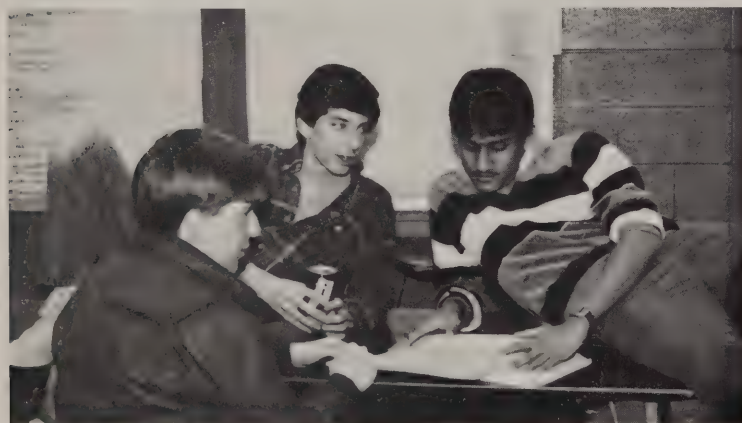

The Interclub Council was formed to help communications between clubs, work on group projects and help clubs face problems. The idea for the council came about during Camp Varsity, when club members started talking and realized they shared many of the same conflicts. During their first year, they showed a lot of potential. They coordinated a major clean-up, assigned time slots to paint the bear and made up calendars since announcements about club activities were not aired over the speaker.

The It's Academic team, spurred on by Karl Mattson, Aaron Crippen, James Tuten and Alec Cooper, reached a new pinnacle in trivia excellence. The team comprehensively researched for each competition. Victories were registered almost automatically in tournaments at Georgetown and Robinson. "It's Academic became more than a one-dimensional trivia contest; it was hip, heavy and wholesome," commented team captain Alec Cooper.

The perfect gift

“Chrysalis for Christmas — the perfect gift...” With brightly colored signs and daily announcements, something new was advertised throughout Lake Braddock this fall. The annual school literary magazine, formerly Chimera, was now Chrysalis. Under this new cover, the magazine continued in the quality and excellence it had been known for in previous years.

At the beginning of the school year the magazine staff held a contest to find a new name. Ideas poured in, the staff voted, and Chrysalis was selected, comparing the stage of a butterfly's growth in its cocoon to the students' time in high school where their talents are developed and brought out.

The reading staff, who this year had the advantage of using a computer to type the written work they chose, worked alongside the art staff, who selected drawings and photos for Chrysalis. Also active was the publicity staff, charged with contacting English teachers and classes and getting the magazine sold. They, for the first time, organized a pre-sale under the slogan “Chrysalis for Christmas” which, through posters, announcements, and a table set up at all lunch shifts, served the dual purpose of selling copies and publicizing the new name.

There were high expectations for this year's issue after last year's success winning both a Meritorious Achievement award and a First Place from the Virginia High School League. As sponsor, Bonnie Geer put it, “This year is the best book ever. I expect to continue in the award winning tradition.” The Chrysalis staff, through hard work and long hours, managed to again exhibit the written and artistic talents of Lake Braddock students.

Together Karl Mattson and Will Young set up the Chrysalis staff's computer, available for use for the first time this year.

Developing talents

Whether it was spraying a silkscreen, developing a picture, or castling a king, the Design Company, the Photography Club, and the Chess Club provided an opportunity for Lake Braddock students to improve their abilities and have fun.

Members of the Design Company, an art/service organization, did projects for the school as well as for themselves. Murals, signs, procelain jewelry, and macramé plant hangers were just some of the things the club made to beautify the school's environment and sell in bazaars. The club was designed to let students not only improve their artistic skill and understand the design process, but to have artistic freedom and enjoy themselves, too.

If snapping pictures was more your style, the Photography Club was open to anyone interested in learning about taking and developing good photos. Some of the members used their talents in contests, such as club President Brett Hopkins, who won first place and an honorable mention in the National Zoo's photo contest.

The club increased the members' knowledge of photography which aided them in making their photos "picture-perfect." Commented club member Cheryl Garrity, "It's worth all the time it takes."

This year was also an award-winning year for the chess club, whose members won second place in the Northern Virginia Region on October 24. The Chess Club, a new club at Lake Braddock, was created with the intention of helping students better their skill in chess and to develop the perfect strategy. Students received rankings within the club based on performance. A few, like David Saslowsky, were nationally ranked with the U.S. Chess Federation and participated in tournaments. As with the other clubs, meetings gave an opportunity to see new faces and make lasting friendships. Exclaimed club sponsor Ann Jaekle, "Chess is amazing!"

Top bananas!

Once again, Lake Braddock's Marching Band and Colorguard brought pride and recognition as they ended yet another successful, and unforgettable season. Throughout mid-August and the early months of school, members dedicated time and energy as they went through two grueling weeks of all day band camp and practice every day after school until 5:00. In spite of the many obstacles involved, the band and guard finally accomplished what they were after — a season full of victories, joy, and memories they would never forget.

Despite all the awards yet to come, the band began their season with disappointment as they placed third overall at their first competition. But as the weeks went by the band came together and at their second competition at James Madison University, won one of many first place awards, including best overall band.

The next competition, State, was held in Charlottesville. Lake Braddock, otherwise known as the "Bananas", defended their title and became, for the 5th consecutive year, Virginia's State Marching Band Champions. Despite all of the band's many triumphs, there was still one goal which had not been reached — the National title in Indianapolis, Indiana. After a 13 hour overnight trip, the band had breakfast and immediately began to practice — in dark, cloudy, 20° weather. In spite of the cold and rain, the weather didn't dampen the band's spirits. They went out and performed each piece of music with unsurmounted energy and vigor. Colorguard captain Lisa Olafsson commented, "It was the most exciting feeling I've ever had. It was a kind of high you can't get from anything else." As director Carl A. Bly had expected, the band made finals. They were one of twelve bands chosen from the original 50. The following day at finals, the band gave their last and most electrifying performance ever. Drum majors, Karla Spagnola and Debi Roberts, led the band as they gave an exciting performance of "Home on the Range," a fast-moving rendition of "Ballet in Brass," and a powerful, overwhelming performance of "Memories" — an overture from 'Cats'. Although the band did not place first, they realized that all the hard work they endured was well worth it. They had made Lake Braddock proud and had shown other schools and marching bands from all across the country, that they were indeed, "Top Bananas!"

Determination pays off

Determination, dedication and drive were the three main factors in the success and achievements of Lake Braddock's Lacrosse team and Colorguard. Throughout the year, members of the two teams put forth a great amount of effort, that in the end, as Laura Kent put it, "was all worth while."

The Lacrosse team, for the first year, became a club. For the last twelve years, players tried to keep the sport alive and in their efforts, achieved their goals. Through the team's hard work and dedication, they were nationally recognized last year in Lacrosse Magazine. With this kind of publicity, lacrosse became even more popular. Thus the sport evolved as a club at Lake Braddock. As returning lacrosse player, Frank DeRonja put it, "It's a real head-banging sport."

As well as lacrosse, Lake Braddock's colorguard was a club which proved to be an exciting sport. Through great determination, the band's sidekick, once again came up on top as they won first place at the State Competiton for the third year in a row. As members soon found out, it was not just another extracurricular activity, it became a time consuming job. Nevertheless, members still enjoyed their work.

Through the long emotional hours spent together, the guard became a place where strong friendships were formed. As Nina Faudale commented, "It's not just a job, it's an adventure!"

Reaching for the top!

Over two hundred and fifty Lake Braddock juniors and seniors reached the top this past year by qualifying as members of the National Honor Society. Of this number, about a hundred and forty were seniors, and the rest juniors.

To be a member of N.H.S. students had to have a grade point average of 3.5 or above. In addition, each had to do volunteer work at such places as nursing homes or hospitals and help other students with their studies through the tutoring program. They also had to demonstrate leadership during their high school years and do a character sketch of themselves on their application. As Mr. Dave Greek, N.H.S. sponsor commented, "Membership in the N.H.S. is an honor and a privilege. Only those special hard working individuals that meet these requirements are invited to join the society."

At monthly meetings, members discussed activities such as the food drive they put together with the Octagon Club and plans for Christmas caroling. Besides N.H.S., many members were participants in a number of other activities such as band, various afterschool clubs, and other honor societies.

By the end of the year, all their help and accomplishments made for feelings of pride and joy, as seniors graduated with honor sashes and juniors looked forward to their own graduation.

In search of the answers

Ever wonder what a crystal looked like in the various stages of its development? Pondered over what rock looked like magnified 500 times? Or perhaps been curious about what a super deluxe, high velocity, beam gun was? The answers to these questions and more all could be found in the after-school world of the Science Club, Intermediate Science Club, or the Science Fiction Club.

The Science Club, sponsored by Don Ehrenberger, involved itself with activities such as designing cars and then holding races. The coming of the long awaited Halley's Comet also provided a new topic for the club to explore. Under the leadership of Co-Presidents George Lucier and Karen Schaub, members partook in such labs as growing crystals, which as described by Brian Greer was "really interesting and a lot of fun."

The Intermediate Science Club, sponsored by Nadine Ray, proved to be one of the most popular intermediate interest clubs, with about

With enthusiastic members and a personal club library of science fiction books to discuss "meetings were always active and occasionally anarchy," said President Marcus Everidge. Going beyond science fiction contained in books the Science Fiction Club held an art contest in which projects were judged by club sponsor Rudy Rumlick on how well it applied to science fiction, originality and quality.

Getting a head start

Lake Braddock's intermediates found many opportunities for competition and demonstrating their spirit in the sports offered to them.

"We formed the team to promote an interest in and fulfill the need for students to learn about gymnastics," explained Intermediate Gymnastics sponsor Julie Ripley. Coaches encouraged all skill levels to attend the Monday and Thursday practices. Tryouts were held for each performance where the more talented exhibited their skills. All their activities, including helping at home high school meets, exposed the members to the exciting world of gymnastics.

A new team was formed this fall; the Dance Company. Sixteen talented girls practiced over two hours a week to prepare for their half-time performances at all home J.V. football and basketball games. In addition to these appearances, they performed their novelty and freeform jazz routines at pep rallies, assemblies, and Fall Follies.

With their own style, the Intermediate Drill Team also entertained crowds. Both teams provided entertainment at pep rallies, assemblies, and Class Nite while the 8th graders had additional half-time performances at freshman football and basketball games.

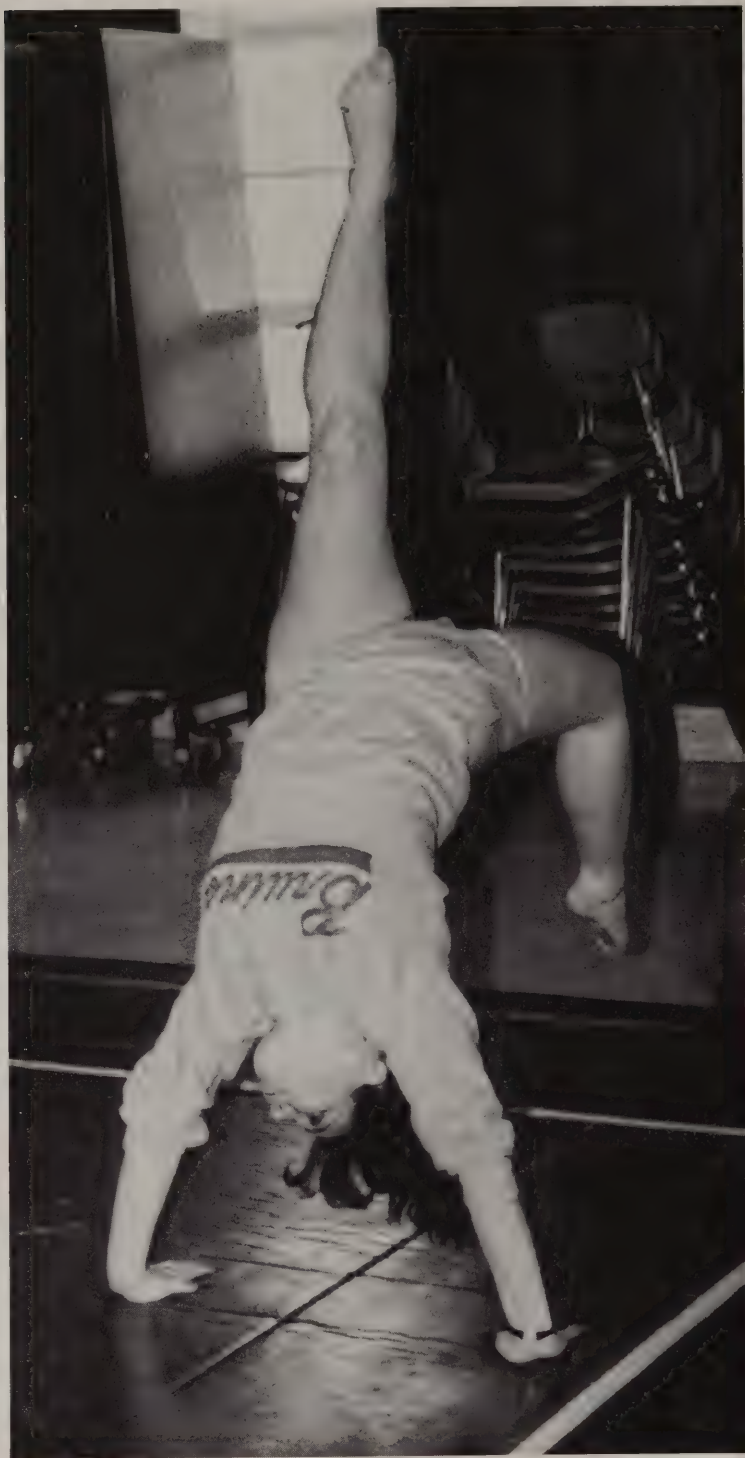

For the sports oriented intermediate boys, there was the chance to practice and compete in wrestling. During their P.E. wrestling unit, a tournament was held and winners from each class in each of the weight groups proceeded to the finals. Finalists practiced for the last tournament, which was held at an intermediate assembly.

Subschool I principal Ann Jaekle said "Intermediate students are really enthusiastic. They represent Lake Braddock, and work long and hard."

Tuning in

“Our club presents a service to the total school; we are small but mighty!” proclaimed Nancy Bard, sponsor of the T.V. club. The club, consisting of only five members, served as a big help to Lake Braddock utilizing their free time every Wednesday to learn all the different aspects of television and video production. President Eddie Landa commented, “The T.V. Club is for anyone who is interested in electronics and working with your hands. It’s also great if you want to make friends!” Make friends they did, as they worked with other classes by taping special reports and projects that classes had worked on. Club members also helped by taping speakers who made one-time appearances at the school so their valuable ideas would not be lost. “Recording events that go on at our school is a terrific way of preserving Lake Braddock’s history,” said counselor Manny Bartolota. “These students do a commendable job.” T.V. Club representatives could also be found at boys’ and girls’ winter basketball games recording all of the exciting action. Later in the year, the club began work on an informative documentary about the yearbook and also the Bear Facts.

All this work finally paid off as the club members found that they had acquired a better understanding of the audio-visual equipment. They had made friends through their class interaction and benefited Lake Braddock in the process!

Steve Parks and Mike Sverdick get the equipment ready to tape renaissance reports done by Betty Ernst’s G.T. English class.

Sheila O'Connor: Fall Follies
"It's a chance for the class to get together and show their talent."

Viresh Prashar: Police pin
"The Police are the greatest and so is the person who gave me the pin."

Todd A. San Martin: Music

"It's truly amazing how you can take one line of music, analyze it, then harmonize it into three other parts."

Lisa Santavicca: An unexpected hug

"It's such a spontaneous act."

Variny Yim: "To make a decision without Cindy, Andy, or Kenny giving me the answer."

The Lake Braddock High School yearbook, Lair Vol. 13, was developed by 48 staff members and two adult sponsors. 3260 copies of the 1986 Lair were printed in Paoli, Pennsylvania by Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas. Tom Scarry was the company representative.

The cover is oyster white Fabrikoid material with a cordova grain. Lake Braddock's school crest was embossed with Gold Metallic applied and rubbed with black. Purple and gold foil were applied to other areas of cover design.

The endsheets are student designed. On both the front and back endsheets, a 100% royal purple and black tool line extend across the two pages.

All body copy was set in Century Schoolbook. Body copy was printed in ten point and captions were printed in eight point italic.

The Lair staff would like to acknowledge Mike Kidd, Tom Scarry and Jeff Segall for their assistance in the publication of the book.

Milestones

This year many memorable events occurred. These ranged from stories of local importance to nationwide and even world-wide significance.

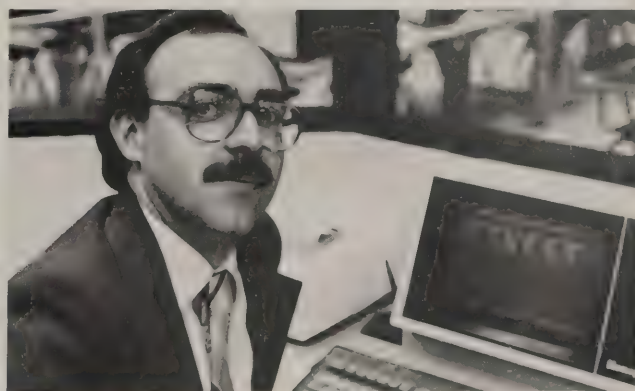

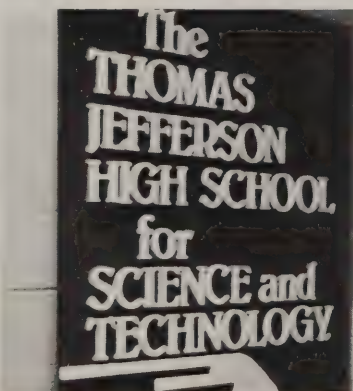

Locally one of the two events which hit closest to home was the new Burke Overpass, which affected Lake Braddock students by shortening the student parking section and also by cutting into some neighborhoods close to the school. Another event which also touched our lives was the opening of the Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology. Not only did a number of our students transferred to the new school, but also many of our talented teachers went to help open and organize the new school. Mr. Dale Rumberger, Mrs. Judy Garcia, Mrs. Judy Colocotronis and others became important factors at Jefferson.

January's space shuttle tragedy affected watchers around the world as well as those in our community. Teacher in space finalist and former Lake Braddock language instructor Judy Garcia was the first NASA representative to comment on the tragedy in a press conference held at the Jefferson School for Science and Technology. Many people compared the sense of shock and loss they felt with the Challenger explosion to that inspired by the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963. For Dr. Alwood, who was present at the Challenger launch the tragedy was a reminder that "Life is a Gift" and that frequently, "The tragedy isn't the losing of life, but having life and not using it to the fullest." Both at Lake Braddock and around the world, people were brought together with a mutual feeling of respect for the late astronauts' courage.

During the end of 1985 and through 1986, incidents came about which affected us locally, one being the building of a new road. For Northern Virginia, a new school for special and gifted students gave members of Lake Braddock, both students and teachers, the chance at specialized education, and an opportunity to shape America's future.

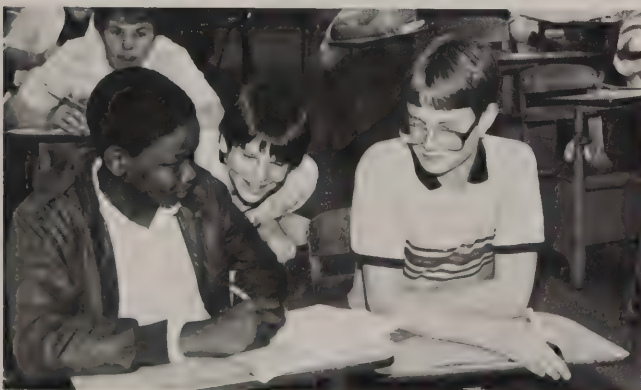

For us as a nation, we drew closer together in tragedy and grew stronger as a community and a country. The students of Lake Braddock have faced changes which may have angered us or saddened us. Not only those mentioned here, but personal achievements or problems also. Though maybe not of national significance, it shows that both big and little things mean a lot.

Caught up in the excitement of Homecoming, Scott Brotemarkle, Heather Johnson, and Cami St. Germain enjoy each others company.

Confused with the intricacies of math, Sean Mahoney leans forward to compare notes with Campbell Tyler and Al Flowers.

Between classes, Shelly Kish and David Petrillo catch up on some news before heading to their next period.

At Fall Follies, the senior class once again unites to demonstrate their class spirit and enthusiasm.

Stifled giggles are heard as one girl opens her locker to see Snickers bars and apple-flavored Jolly Ranchers fall to her feet.

or of a very ripe tomato as his "dreamgirl" approaches him, to see his buddies laughing and making wolf whistles to show their approval. In a corner, two friends are seen talking quietly to each other — one comforting the other as tears begin to flow.

These were a few scenes that friends shared during the school year. Each had special meaning to the individuals involved and helped build the strong relationships between people. Friendships were apparent throughout the year as laughter and talking between students could be heard all over the school.

Throughout the year it was the little things that friends shared every day that meant a lot. A friendly smile, personal jokes, or a quick trip to McDonald's for a bite to eat would brighten anyone's day. Activities out of school like going shopping at Fair Oaks Mall, watching "The Sure Thing" for the fiftieth time at someone's house, and visiting Georgetown and Washington D.C. at night all contributed to the times that many would remember as the best times together.
